U. N. PROPOSES NEW PARLEY SITE

Truman Signs New Selective Service Rules

Childless Married Men Now Eligible

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — President Truman today signed new draft regulations making half a million childless married men eligible for military service.

The new regulations are designed to put into effect the draft law enacted by Congress last June.

It narrows military exemptions by making eligible for service married men with only a wife as a dependent, except in cases of extreme hardship.

Brig. Gen. Louis Renfrow, acting director of Selective Service, told news men the new regulations make some 500,000 men heretofore deferred, eligible for duty.

Hope For 200,000 Men

Renfrow added that Selective Service hopes to get 200,000 men out of that total. This estimate may be high because the Army's rejection rate heretofore has been about 53 per cent, and various other causes affect eligibility.

The new regulations for the first time also:

1. Make aliens with permanent residence in the United States liable for the draft. They are exempt only if diplomatic personnel, or if they are citizens of one of 20 countries with which the United States has signed military exemption treaties. Aliens previously had not been liable unless they had taken out their first citizenship papers.

17-Year-Olds May Volunteer

2. Allow 17-year-olds to volunteer for induction with the written consent of a parent or guardian. Volunteers have not been accepted heretofore until they reached draft registration age of 18.

3. Require conscientious objectors to perform some work of national importance for two years.

4. Provide for selection of men by age group to prevent exclusive call-up of young men.

Draft boards in the past have been given quotas, and some boards have dipped much more deeply into the younger age group than other boards to fill their quotas.

Renfrow said the change will permit a levelling off of calls while pools of older men ar still available.

Attempts To Hike Tax Bill Defeated

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Administration leaders in the Senate lost two attempts today to write more taxes into the Senate's $5,506,000,000 revenue bill.

A proposal for a 20 per cent withholding tax on dividends and interest, which would yield an estimated $320,000,000 a year, was defeated by a vote of 70 to 15.

The Senate also voted 54 to 33 against an amendment to make new and higher corporation income taxes retroactive to Jan. 1 instead of April 1. Sponsors estimated this would have added about $500,000,000 to corporation tax revenues this year.

The votes were defeats for a bloc of 15 senators trying to give President Truman a tax bill which will yield revenues closer to the $10,000,000,000 figure he considers necessary to curb inflation. The House has passed a bill calling for $7,200,000,000 in new taxes.

Draft Deferment Tests For Collegians Slated

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Selective Service scheduled two new qualification tests today for college students who want to become eligible for deferment from the draft.

The first test will be given Thursday, December 13, prmarly for students whose academic year—and current draft deferment—will end next January.

The other will be given Thursday, April 24.

Applications for Dec. 13 test must be postmarked not later than midnight Nov. 5, and for the April 24 test not later than midnight March 10.

Lawyer Lists Cases Bought From Boyle; Denies 'Subterfuge'

Siskind Protests Bitterly But Bows To Probers' Order To Name Clients

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Senate investigations subcommittee tonight required Washington Lawyer Max Siskind to tell publicly the names of a group of clients he took over from Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, Jr., and represented before government agencies.

Protesting to the end that is was a violation of his rights, Siskind finally began the recitation. He reported "satisfactory" settlements in the first eight cases he mentioned from a list of 23.

DENIES 'SUBTERFUGE'—Max Siskind (above), Washington lawyer, yesterday hotly denied a charge by Sen. Nixon (R-Calif) that he and Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, Jr., used "subterfuge" to cover up their true financial relation. Siskind said he had no part in obtaining RFC loans for the American Lithofold Corp., of St. Louis, but admitted he bought law clients of Boyle when the latter quit law practice to become Democratic chairman. (AP Wirephoto)

The 23 cases were those he had sworn earlier he purchased from Boyle in 1949 for an agreed price of $150,000, with no written agreement. Sen. Nixon (R-Calif) denounced the deal as a "subterfuge" to hide the true financial relationship between Boyle and Siskind.

Siskind accused Nixon of "being unfair" to him, and denied the accusation.

Insisting that Boyle sold the cases to him after Boyle became the salaried Democratic national vice chairman, and had nothing to do with them since, Siskind named as clients:

Missouri Oil Firm

1. Simpson Oil Co., Cape Girardeau, Mo., which he said he represented when it got a Reconstruction Finance Corp. loan of "about $350,000" in August, 1949. He said he had handled the negotiations jointly with Boyle, before buying the case which involved a $1,000-a-month retainer fee and no additional fees.

Siskind said he collected all of $13,500 fees still due from the firm. He said the client had been referred to him and Boyle by Parker and Knipmeyer, Kansas City, Mo., lawyers.

2. Vawter Construction Co. Kansas City, Kans., defended before a special hearing commissioner on charges of violating War Production Board construction limits. No violation found. Case referred by Bellemere and Bellemere, Kansas City, Mo., and valued in $150,000. Settlement with Boyle at $9,500. Received to date, $2,600 on account, and $6,900 still due.

3. "A claimant named Hartmon" against the Mexican Mixed Claims Commission. Got $11,000 settlement. $500 valuation of the account paid in full.

Boyle To Testify

4. Johnson Clinic, Kansas City, Mo., in a case before the Food and Drug Administration which Siskind said charged the firm with misleading labeling. $6,250 fees never paid and written off as "no value."

5. Geo-Mineral Co., address not given, civil case before Food and Drug Administration. $2,500 valuation of account. Settled for $2,000.

Britain And U. S. Consider Action In Iran Oil Crisis

Attlee Reportedly Asks Truman's Aid

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Prime Minister Attlee is calling on President Truman to do all he can to help Britain keep her oil men in Iran, informed sources said today.

The British government protested to Iran against Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's order for the explusion by next Thursday of the 300-odd British technicians who have remained at the shut-down refinery center of Abadan on a caretaker basis.

Further Action Considered

Secretary of State Acheson announced in Washington that the United States and Britain are giving urgent consideration to possible further action in the crisis which has been building up since Iran nationalized Iranian properties of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company last spring.

Acheson conferred at length with British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks. Neither had any direct affirmative comment on the reported Attlee message, but London informants said the message likely made clear that British is determined to stay on in Abadan.

The new U. S. ambassador to Iran, Loy Henderson, also was involved in the oil problem. Premier Mossadegh called him into conference in Tehran last night. Their talk was described as an informal general discussion of the situation. No details were given out.

Unusual Conference

The conference was unusual in that Henderson, former envoy to India who succeeds the retiring Henry F. Grady, had not yet presented his credentials to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi. He will attend to that formality tomorrow.

OPS Reports 222 Slaughterhouses Violate Controls

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The government said today that 222 slaughterhouses in all sections of the country have been reported as violators in the big push to enforce the beef price control programs.

An Office of Price Stabilization official said the number of actual violations might run into the hundreds. He explained that in many cases two or more violations were found in a single slaughter house.

OPS also disclosed that violators were tagged in more than 50 cities as a result of the drive begun yesterday by around 1,500 OPS agents. An agency official said this meant violators were found in at least half the cities where the agents swooped down to check on operations of the meat packing and distributing industry.

Price Enforcement Director Edward P. Morgan said the results "indicate widespread violations of OPS meat regulations." He added in a statement that the inquiry into illegal practices will continue indefinitely.

Five Decomposed Bodies Found In Old Funeral Home

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 (AP)—Police, forcing their way into a locked and shuttered former funeral home in Northeast Philadelphia today, said they found the bodies of five men, all so badly decomposed they were beyond recognition.

The bodies were in the basement workrooms of the three-story establishment of William H. Beard, whose license as a funeral director was revoked Aug. 15 by the Pennsylvania State Board of Undertakers.

The first of the bodies had been released to Beard by the coroner's office on March 17 and the fifth on June 6. Health authorities said decomposition had been arrested at advanced stages by the use of a strong preservative.

Police removed the bodies to the city morgue.

Assistant District Attorney Americo V. Cortese immediately ordered the arrest of the missing Beard. Cortese said Beard would be charged with maintaining a health menace and public nuisance.

Beard applied to the Bureau of Vital Statistics on Tuesday for permits to bury the five bodies.

Why Beard had made no attempt to bury the bodies promptly could not be learned. And Cortese said he meant to find out when Beard is apprehended.

Allied Airmen Meet Up With New Red Jet

Record Sky Battle Fought Over Korea

U. N. COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Thursday, Sept. 27 (AP) — A new Communist high-wing super MIG went into action Wednesday in the biggest single day's jet battle in history. A total of 256 jets took part.

Allied B-26 light bombers destroyed or damaged 964 enemy vehicles for a new record for a single day. The previous record of 898 was set Sept. 6.

In all, Far East Air Force planes flew 980 sorties Wednesday. Most of the Communist vehicles were knocked out in night strikes.

On the ground, bitter fighting raged on Heartbreak Ridge in Eastern Korea with elements of the U. S. 23rd Division just below the crest of the bloody ridge. The crest has exchanged hands four times.

Battlewagon Pounds Reds

The battleship New Jersey, in support of infantry, poured 95 tons of high explosives Wednesday into enemy positions in the Kansong area on the Korean east coast. Communists were flushed from their dugouts by 16-inch projectiles and then raked by three and six inch shellfire.

American fighter pilots returned with the news that the Reds had introduced the swift new fighter in a bristling challenge of Allied air supremacy.

The Communists lost possibly two jets and suffered damage to 12 others, the U. S. Fifth Air Force said. It did not report any Allied losses.

Two major battles were fought Wednesday. One, the largest single jet engagement, involved 197 planes.

Plane Might Be MIG-19

(Reports in Tokyo indicated the new Red plane might be the Russian-made MIG-19.

(High sources in Tokyo said the new daring and eagerness of Red pilots seemed to presage a challenge all over the Korean peninsula. They said the Reds now may have the air strength they had lacked to conduct all-out war.)

The number of planes involved dwarfed the 117 which fought history's longest jet battle Tuesday. In that scrap, 37 American Sabre jets whipped 80 MIGs, shooting down five and damaging five. The Allied Air Force said one Sabre jet was damaged.

McCarthy Defies Subcommittee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Sen. Benton (D-Conn) said today he will give the Senate a 15,000 word case against Sen. McCarthy's (R-Wis) Red-hunting methods, but McCarthy declared he will continue them just the same.

Benton will appear Friday before a Rules subcommittee to explain his resolution requesting a formal inquiry to determine whether McCarthy should be expelled from the Senate.

The Connecticut senator promised "something new" in his charges.

McCarthy challenged the subcommittee to checkrein his campaign against alleged Communists in government.

"I am not in the slightest concerned," he wrote, "with what this subcommittee does ihsofar as my fight to expose communism and corruption in Washington is concerned. This subcommittee can not in the slightest influence my activities."

The statement was made in a letter to the Senate Rules Committee, of which the subcommittee is a part. Both McCarthy and Benton are members of the full committee, but not the subcommittee.

20 Killed When Trains Collide In Alpine Fog

LANGENWANG, Austria, Sept. 26 (AP) — A Vienna-Rome express train collided with a stationary freight train in a heavy Alpine fog last midnight, killing 20 persons and injuring 40.

All the dead were believed to be Italians. Most were asleep.

The crash telescoped a wooden first-class coach in which members of an Italian railwaymen's organization were returning home from a vacation in Vienna and rammed a baggage car atop the coach's splintered wreckage.

Other passenger cars behind were jolted together, but the majority of their occupants escaped injury.

Hasn't Spent Cent In 15 Years

Lester L. Zern (center), 31-year-old trucker who says he hasn't spent a cent in 15 years, read where Uncle Sam was running short on pennies and banks were having a hard time meeting the demand, so he decided to do his share. Above, Zern shows up at a bank with 52,682 pennies, enough to almost fill a tin washtub. It took L. G. Gardner (left), bank employe, almost an hour to count the coppers. Zern said he started saving pennies "just for fun" when he finished high school.

Big 3 Countries Would Lift Arms Curbs On Italy

Ex-Foe Due To Join West Defense Lineup

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Big Three countries today declared their willingness to wipe out peace treaty restrictions on rearming of Italy.

The joint statement, and an accompanying pledge of United Nations principles, amounted to a formal welcome to Italy as a full partner in the West's defense lineup.

At the same time, Secretary of State Acheson indirectly warned Moscow against misjudging the reason for this and similar moves to build up "situations of strength" in the Western World.

Climax To Premier's Visit

"Our purpose is peace with freedom and justice," he said. But, he added, "the desire for peace is not enough; the free world must also have the strength to enforce the peace."

The move to change the 1947 Italian peace pact came as a climax to Italian Prime Minister Alcide DeGasperi's three-day conference with President Truman, Acheson and other top American officials.

High American officials told a reporter the United States favors knocking out a total of 29 articles in the Italian treaty. This would permit Italy to build up its skeleton army, navy and air force far beyond thep resent 300,000 maximum. It also would allow the Italian government, with American aid, to equip Italy's armed forces with jet fighters, bombers, tanks, battleships, and submarines, all weapons now severely restricted under the pact.

"Events" Necessitate Revision

The American - British - French declaration said the three governments will give "favorable consideration" to Italy's request to remove "permanent restrictions and discriminations now in existence."

The postwar penalties have now been "wholly overtaken by events or have no justification in present circumstances," it continued.

The "present circumstances" were not identified. But they obviously include Russia's acts in arming Hungary, Bulgaria, and Romania far in excess of similar peace treaty restrictions.

Contempt Indictment Fired At Balky Bookie

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—Brooklyn's angry grand jury lashed anew at Harry Gross today with a contempt indictment that could cost him 10 years in prison.

Gross is the balky bookie kingpin who last week refused to testify against 18 policemen. This wrecked the grand jury's big bribe case against the cops.

The 35-year-old Gross already is under five year sentence on other contempt charges. And he faces up to 68 years in prison when he is sentenced tomorrow for gambling.

Tornado Kills Six Persons

WAUPACA, Wis., Sept. 26 (AP) — A roaring tornado ripped through Waupaca County in Central Wisconsin this afternoon, hurling six persons to their deaths. Another tornado struck in Columbia County to the south some 30 minutes later, killing one person.

Among the Waupaca County dead were five members of one family. That tornado struck at approximately 3:45 (CST) according to the smashed watch on one of the victims. The Columbia County twister hit approximately 100 miles to the south at about 4:30.

The violence capped a day of general rain and high wind in the state.

O'Conor Opposes 'Deal' For Oatis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — William Oatis must be freed from jail in Czechoslovakia, Sen. O'Conor (D-Md) said today, but he should not be made the subject of any "bargain" or "deal" with the Communists.

Oatis, then chief of the Associated Press bureau in Prague, was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment last July 4 in what O'Conor called "trumped up" spy charges.

The Maryland senators said "our government should avail of every honorable means to secure his liberty." But he added:

"Decency is not the subject of barter. Justice and fair play are not saleable commodities to be offered on the auction block."

O'Conor spoke out in the Senate after the Czech ambassador, Vladimir Prochazka, hinted at a news conference yesterday that Oatis might be freed if steps were taken to "clean the atmosphere" of relations between the United States and Czechoslovakia.

Instead of making trade concessions to the Czechs, O'Conor said, "we should abandon all trade with them and should refuse to treat them as worthy of relationship with our nation. Their conduct in the Oatis case shows conclusively that they are not to be trusted to handle any agreements faithfully and uprightly."

British Princess Postpones Visit To Canada, U. S.

King's Condition Still Cause For Anxiety

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Princess Elizabeth decided tonight to postpone her Canadian tour and stay near the bedside of her father, King George VI, during the next few anxious days of his recovery from a lung operation.

The heiress presumptive to the British throne and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, put off for one or two weeks their royal visit that was to have started at Quebec Oct. 2 and to have included a flight to Washington Oct. 24. Canada's prime minister, Louis St. Laurent, suggested the postponement.

King Not Out Of Danger

The announcement of the postponement came from Clarence House, the London residence of the princess and the duke, 14 minutes after Buckingham Palace warned the British people the king's condition would cause "some anxiety for the next week or 10 days."

The king underwent a serious lung operation Sunday.

The latest announcements said his strength was improving, but their tone was not so optimistic as yesterday's bulletins.

The statement from the palace tonight said:

"In connection with the medical bulletins issued periodically from Buckingham Palace, it should be remembered that, while the king's gradual progress towards recovery has been uninterrupted and although no complications have arisen so far, there will inevitably be a period of some anxiety for the next week or 10 days."

Crowd Is Uncertain

A morning bulletin said:

"The king has had a less restful night, but his majesty's general condition this morning is good and progress is maintained."

The crowd before the palace gate was not sure whether the announcements were good news or bad. A London specialist, however, said he was convinced there was no cause for alarm.

Place 6 Miles From Kaesong Is Suggested

Liaison Teams Fail To Hold 4th Session

TOKYO, Thursday, Sept. 27 (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today proposed that the site for the suspended Korean truce talks be moved from Kaesong to Songhyon, six miles east of the present meeting place.

Ridgway's suggestion came after Allied and Red liaison officers failed to meet for the fourth session at Kaesong to discuss ways of getting the Red-suspended truce parleys going again.

The message was sent to the Red high command, North Korean General Kim Il Sung and Chinese Red General Peng Teh-Huai.

The Red negotiators' broke off the talks at Kaesong, in a Red-held sector of Western Korea Aug. 23 charging that an Allied plane bombed the neutral zone the night before.

The Allies investigated and denied the charge. Since then the Reds have kept the talks suspended while piling up a series of charges that Allied planes and troops had violated the zone.

All but two charges were denied.

Would Discuss Buffer Zone

Ridgway's message said:

"Since your liaison officers have stated they are not authorized to discuss or arrange satisfactory conditions for resumption of armistice talks, I submit the following proposal directly to you. I believe this proposal provides for arrangements that can be mutually satisfactory to both our sides.

"I propose that both delegations meet as early as possible at a place approximately midway between the battle lines in the vicinity of Songhyon.

"I propose that upon resumption of delegations meetings at this place, both delegations be prepared to return to the discussion of item two of the agenda immediately following any discussion that may be needed to clarify physical and security arrangements at the meeting place.

"If you concur, I will arrange to have our liaison officers meet to discuss erection of the necessary physical facilities."

Item two on the agenda was the fixing of a buffer zone between the opposing forces during a cease-fire.

Breakoff Had Been Indicated

A breakoff in the liaison meetings had been indicated earlier today when the Allied officers failed to depart after receiving a Communist message. It was shortly after this that Ridgeway's headquarters said it would have "an important announcement."

The Communists replied this morning to a U. N. command message sent at 7 a. m. suggesting another meeting at 10 a. m. of liaison officers to discuss conditons for resuming the armistice parley.

Wednesday's meeting was the longest yet, lasting one hour and 20 minutes. Once again the Reds insisted that formal negotiations begin immediately. And once again the Allies asked that safeguards be arranged first to prevent interruptions when the meetings resume.

Prisoner Hopes To Sell His Songs, Repay Fraud Victims

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 26 (AP)—A prisoner in the Allegheny County workhouse hopes tinkling tunes written in his cell will repay 180 home-hungry victims of his $212,000 housing swindle.

Whether they will depends on Raymond E. Reynolds' ability to sell the songs.

Reynolds, 52-year-old former builder serving a 10-year sentence, asked the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in a letter to help him peddle the compositions. He added:

"I don't want a penny for myself. My greatest desire is to pay back those people from whom I obtained the money."

He was convicted in the county courts of accepting down payments on homes which were never built. But he will be tried later in Federal District Court on charges of using the mails to defraud would-be home buyers—mostly veterans—in several states.

Reynolds' tunes deal with romantic themes but all the romance has gone out of his life. His first wife, Pearl, divorced him while he was a fugitive. During the 22 months he was in hiding, Reynolds married Maureen Jones of El Dorado, Ark. He said that marriage was annulled.

The once dapper contractor submitted a song to the newspaper as a sample. It was entitled "Defiant Heart, Oh, Make Her Hear My Plea." He said it took him a week to compose the music and lyrics.

"I have written about 50 songs," his letter related. "But this is the first time I have tried to sell them."

Britain And U. S. Consider Action In Iran Oil Crisis

Attlee Reportedly Asks Truman's Aid

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Prime Minister Attlee is calling on President Truman to do all he can to help Britain keep her oil men in Iran, informed sources said today.

The British government protested to Iran against Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's order for the explusion by next Thursday of the 300-odd British technicians who have remained at the shut-down refinery center of Abadan on a caretaker basis.

Further Action Considered

Secretary of State Acheson announced in Washington that the United States and Britain are giving urgent consideration to possible further action in the crisis which has been building up since Iran nationalized Iranian properties of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company last spring.

Acheson conferred at length with British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks. Neither had any direct affirmative comment on the reported Attlee message, but London informants said the message likely made clear that British is determined to stay on in Abadan.

The new U. S. ambassador to Iran, Loy Henderson, also was involved in the oil problem. Premier Mossadegh called him into conference in Tehran last night. Their talk was described as an informal general discussion of the situation. No details were given out.

Unusual Conference

The conference was unusual in that Henderson, former envoy to India who succeeds the retiring Henry F. Grady, had not yet presented his credentials to Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi. He will attend to that formality tomorrow.

OPS Reports 222 Slaughterhouses Violate Controls

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The government said today that 222 slaughterhouses in all sections of the country have been reported as violators in the big push to enforce the beef price control programs.

An Office of Price Stabilization official said the number of actual violations might run into the hundreds. He explained that in many cases two or more violations were found in a single slaughter house.

OPS also disclosed that violators were tagged in more than 50 cities as a result of the drive begun yesterday by around 1,500 OPS agents. An agency official said this meant violators were found in at least half the cities where the agents swooped down to check on operations of the meat packing and distributing industry.

Price Enforcement Director Edward P. Morgan said the results "indicate widespread violations of OPS meat regulations." He added in a statement that the inquiry into illegal practices will continue indefinitely.

Five Decomposed Bodies Found In Old Funeral Home

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 (AP)—Police, forcing their way into a locked and shuttered former funeral home in Northeast Philadelphia today, said they found the bodies of five men, all so badly decomposed they were beyond recognition.

The bodies were in the basement workrooms of the three-story establishment of William H. Beard, whose license as a funeral director was revoked Aug. 15 by the Pennsylvania State Board of Undertakers.

The first of the bodies had been released to Beard by the coroner's office on March 17 and the fifth on June 6. Health authorities said decomposition had been arrested at advanced stages by the use of a strong preservative.

Police removed the bodies to the city morgue.

Assistant District Attorney Americo V. Cortese immediately ordered the arrest of the missing Beard. Cortese said Beard would be charged with maintaining a health menace and public nuisance.

Beard applied to the Bureau of Vital Statistics on Tuesday for permits to bury the five bodies.

Why Beard had made no attempt to bury the bodies promptly could not be learned. And Cortese said he meant to find out when Beard is apprehended.

Allied Airmen Meet Up With New Red Jet

Record Sky Battle Fought Over Korea

U. N. COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Thursday, Sept. 27 (AP) — A new Communist high-wing super MIG went into action Wednesday in the biggest single day's jet battle in history. A total of 256 jets took part.

Allied B-26 light bombers destroyed or damaged 964 enemy vehicles for a new record for a single day. The previous record of 898 was set Sept. 6.

In all, Far East Air Force planes flew 980 sorties Wednesday. Most of the Communist vehicles were knocked out in night strikes.

On the ground, bitter fighting raged on Heartbreak Ridge in Eastern Korea with elements of the U. S. 23rd Division just below the crest of the bloody ridge. The crest has exchanged hands four times.

Battlewagon Pounds Reds

The battleship New Jersey, in support of infantry, poured 95 tons of high explosives Wednesday into enemy positions in the Kansong area on the Korean east coast. Communists were flushed from their dugouts by 16-inch projectiles and then raked by three and six inch shellfire.

American fighter pilots returned with the news that the Reds had introduced the swift new fighter in a bristling challenge of Allied air supremacy.

The Communists lost possibly two jets and suffered damage to 12 others, the U. S. Fifth Air Force said. It did not report any Allied losses.

Two major battles were fought Wednesday. One, the largest single jet engagement, involved 197 planes.

Plane Might Be MIG-19

(Reports in Tokyo indicated the new Red plane might be the Russian-made MIG-19.

(High sources in Tokyo said the new daring and eagerness of Red pilots seemed to presage a challenge all over the Korean peninsula. They said the Reds now may have the air strength they had lacked to conduct all-out war.)

The number of planes involved dwarfed the 117 which fought history's longest jet battle Tuesday. In that scrap, 37 American Sabre jets whipped 80 MIGs, shooting down five and damaging five. The Allied Air Force said one Sabre jet was damaged.

McCarthy Defies Subcommittee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Sen. Benton (D-Conn) said today he will give the Senate a 15,000 word case against Sen. McCarthy's (R-Wis) Red-hunting methods, but McCarthy declared he will continue them just the same.

Benton will appear Friday before a Rules subcommittee to explain his resolution requesting a formal inquiry to determine whether McCarthy should be expelled from the Senate.

The Connecticut senator promised "something new" in his charges.

McCarthy challenged the subcommittee to checkrein his campaign against alleged Communists in government.

"I am not in the slightest concerned," he wrote, "with what this subcommittee does insofar as my fight to expose communism and corruption in Washington is concerned. This subcommittee can not in the slightest influence my activities."

The statement was made in a letter to the Senate Rules Committee, of which the subcommittee is a part. Both McCarthy and Benton are members of the full committee, but not the subcommittee.

20 Killed When Trains Collide In Alpine Fog

LANGENWANG, Austria, Sept. 26 (AP) — A Vienna-Rome express train collided with a stationary freight train in a heavy Alpine fog last midnight, killing 20 persons and injuring 40.

All the dead were believed to be Italians. Most were asleep.

The crash telescoped a wooden first-class coach in which members of an Italian railwaymen's organization were returning home from a vacation in Vienna and rammed a baggage car atop the coach's splintered wreckage.

Other passenger cars behind were jolted together, but the majority of their occupants escaped injury.

Hasn't Spent Cent In 15 Years

Lester L. Zern (center), 31-year-old trucker who says he hasn't spent a cent in 15 years, read where Uncle Sam was running short on pennies and banks were having a hard time meeting the demand, so he decided to do his share. Above, Zern shows up at a bank with 52,682 pennies, enough to almost fill a tin washtub. It took L. G. Gardner (left), bank employe, almost an hour to count the coppers. Zern said he started saving pennies "just for fun" when he finished high school.

Big 3 Countries Would Lift Arms Curbs On Italy

Ex-Foe Due To Join West Defense Lineup

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—The Big Three countries today declared their willingness to wipe out peace treaty restrictions on rearming of Italy.

The joint statement, and an accompanying pledge of United Nations principles, amounted to a formal welcome to Italy as a full partner in the West's defense lineup.

At the same time, Secretary of State Acheson indirectly warned Moscow against misjudging the reason for this and similar moves to build up "situations of strength" in the Western World.

Climax To Premier's Visit

"Our purpose is peace with freedom and justice," he said. But, he added, "the desire for peace is not enough; the free world must also have the strength to enforce the peace."

The move to change the 1947 Italian peace pact came as a climax to Italian Prime Minister Alcide De-Gasperi's three-day conference with President Truman, Acheson and other top American officials.

High American officials told a reporter the United States favors knocking out a total of 29 articles in the Italian treaty. This would permit Italy to build up its skeleton army, navy and air force far beyond thep resent 300,000 maximum. It also would allow the Italian government, with American aid, to equip Italy's armed forces with jet fighters, bombers, tanks, battleships, and submarines, all weapons now severely restricted under the pact.

"Events" Necessitate Revision

The American - British - French declaration said the three governments will give "favorable consideration" to Italy's request to remove "permanent restrictions and discriminations now in existence."

The postwar penalties have now been "wholly overtaken by events or have no justification in present circumstances," it continued.

The "present circumstances" were not identified. But they obviously include Russia's acts in arming Hungary, Bulgaria, and Romania far in excess of similar peace treaty restrictions.

Contempt Indictment Fired At Balky Bookie

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—Brooklyn's angry grand jury lashed anew at Harry Gross today with a contempt indictment that could cost him 10 years in prison.

Gross is the balky bookie kingpin who last week refused to testify against 18 policemen. This wrecked the grand jury's big bribe case against the cops.

The 35-year-old Gross already is under five year sentence on other contempt charges. And he faces up to 68 years in prison when he is sentenced tomorrow for gambling.

Tornado Kills Six Persons

WAUPACA, Wis., Sept. 26 (AP) — A roaring tornado ripped through Waupaca County in Central Wisconsin this afternoon, hurling six persons to their deaths. Another tornado struck in Columbia County to the south some 30 minutes later, killing one person.

Among the Waupaca County dead were five members of one family. That tornado struck at approximately 3:45 (CST) according to the smashed watch on one of the victims. The Columbia County twister hit approximately 100 miles to the south at about 4:30.

The violence capped a day of general rain and high wind in the state.

O'Conor Opposes 'Deal' For Oatis

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — William Oatis must be freed from jail in Czechoslovakia, Sen. O'Conor (D-Md) said today, but he should not be made the subject of any "bargain" or "deal" with the Communists.

Oatis, then chief of the Associated Press bureau in Prague, was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment last July 4 in what O'Conor called "trumped up" spy charges.

The Maryland senators said "our government should avail of every honorable means to secure his liberty." But he added:

"Decency is not the subject of barter. Justice and fair play are not saleable commodities to be offered on the auction block."

O'Conor spoke out in the Senate after the Czech ambassador, Vladimir Prochazka, hinted at a news conference yesterday that Oatis might be freed if steps were taken to "clean the atmosphere" of relations between the United States and Czechoslovakia.

Instead of making trade concessions to the Czechs, O'Conor said, "we should abandon all trade with them and should refuse to treat them as worthy of relationship with our nation. Their conduct in the Oatis case shows conclusively that they are not to be trusted to handle any agreements faithfully and uprightly."

Prisoner Hopes To Sell His Songs, Repay Fraud Victims

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 26 (AP)—A prisoner in the Allegheny County workhouse hopes tinkling tunes written in his cell will repay 180 home-hungry victims of his $212,000 housing swindle.

Whether they will depends on Raymond E. Reynolds' ability to sell the songs.

Reynolds, 52-year-old former builder serving a 10-year sentence, asked the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in a letter to help him peddle the compositions. He added:

"I don't want a penny for myself. My greatest desire is to pay back those people from whom I obtained the money."

He was convicted in the county courts of accepting down payments on homes which were never built. But he will be tried later in Federal District Court on charges of using the mails to defraud would-be home buyers—mostly veterans—in several states.

Reynolds' tunes deal with romantic themes but all the romance has gone out of his life. His first wife, Pearl, divorced him while he was a fugitive. During the 22 months he was in hiding, Reynolds married Maureen Jones of El Dorado, Ark. He said that marriage was annulled.

The once dapper contractor submitted a song to the newspaper as a sample. It was entitled "Defiant Heart, Oh, Make Her Hear My Plea." He said it took him a week to compose the music and lyrics.

"I have written about 50 songs," his letter related. "But this is the first time I have tried to sell them."

British Princess Postpones Visit To Canada, U. S.

King's Condition Still Cause For Anxiety

LONDON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Princess Elizabeth decided tonight to postpone her Canadian tour and stay near the bedside of her father, King George VI, during the next few anxious days of his recovery from a lung operation.

The heiress presumptive to the British throne and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, put off for one or two weeks their royal visit that was to have started at Quebec Oct. 2 and to have included a flight to Washington Oct. 24. Canada's prime minister, Louis St. Laurent, suggested the postponement.

King Not Out Of Danger

The announcement of the postponement came from Clarence House, the London residence of the princess and the duke, 14 minutes after Buckingham Palace warned the British people the king's condition would cause "some anxiety for the next week or 10 days."

The king underwent a serious lung operation Sunday.

The latest announcements said his strength was improving, but their tone was not so optimistic as yesterday's bulletins.

The statement from the palace tonight said:

"In connection with the medical bulletins issued periodically from Buckingham Palace, it should be remembered that, while the king's gradual progress towards recovery has been uninterrupted and although no complications have arisen so far, there will inevitably be a period of some anxiety for the next week or 10 days."

Crowd Is Uncertain

A morning bulletin said:

"The king has had a less restful night, but his majesty's general condition this morning is good and progress is maintained."

The crowd before the palace gate was not sure whether the announcements were good news or bad. A London specialist, however, said he was convinced there was no cause for alarm.

Place 6 Miles From Kaesong Is Suggested

Liaison Teams Fail To Hold 4th Session

TOKYO, Thursday, Sept. 27 (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today proposed that the site for the suspended Korean truce talks be moved from Kaesong to Songhyon, six miles east of the present meeting place.

Ridgway's suggestion came after Allied and Red liaison officers failed to meet for the fourth session at Kaesong to discuss ways of getting the Red-suspended truce parleys going again.

The message was sent to the Red high command, North Korean General Kim Il Sung and Chinese Red General Peng Teh-Huai.

The Red negotiators' broke off the talks at Kaesong, in a Red-held sector of Western Korea Aug. 23 charging that an Allied plane bombed the neutral zone the night before.

The Allies investigated and denied the charge. Since then the Reds have kept the talks suspended while piling up a series of charges that Allied planes and troops had violated the zone.

All but two charges were denied.

Would Discuss Buffer Zone

Ridgway's message said:

"Since your liaison officers have stated they are not authorized to discuss or arrange satisfactory conditions for resumption of armistice talks, I submit the following proposal directly to you. I believe this proposal provides for arrangements that can be mutually satisfactory to both our sides.

"I propose that both delegations meet as early as possible at a place approximately midway between the battle lines in the vicinity of Songhyon.

"I propose that upon resumption of delegations meetings at this place, both delegations be prepared to return to the discussion of item two of the agenda immediately following any discussion that may be needed to clarify physical and security arrangements at the meeting place.

"If you concur, I will arrange to have our liaison officers meet to discuss erection of the necessary physical facilities."

Item two on the agenda was the fixing of a buffer zone between the opposing forces during a cease-fire.

Breakoff Had Been Indicated

A breakoff in the liaison meetings had been indicated earlier today when the Allied officers failed to depart after receiving a Communist message. It was shortly after this that Ridgeway's headquarters said it would have "an important announcement."

The Communists replied this morning to a U. N. command message sent at 7 a. m. suggesting another meeting at 10 a. m. of liaison officers to discuss conditons for resuming the armistice parley.

Wednesday's meeting was the longest yet, lasting one hour and 20 minutes. Once again the Reds insisted that formal negotiations begin immediately. And once again the Allies asked that safeguards be arranged first to prevent interruptions when the meetings resume.

The youthful driver, according to state police, was traveling on Route 220 toward Keyser, when his automobile suddenly left the highway and plunged into a tree. Investigating the mishap is Trooper George Spioch of the Maryland State Police. The cause of the accident was not known last night, police said.

Farmers Urge

"Something should be done about this coal stripping business. The strip mining of coal tears up the farms. I think the USDA should handle this problem probably through SCS. They should see to it that this land is put back into usable condition."

William L. Frazee suggested that veterans on the farm and others be able to get production credit quickly for livestock and machinery.

"I would like to recommend that the Department of Agriculture either set up a new agency or through some agency already in operation, be concerned about the condition of farm to market roads," J. M. Hughes suggested. "Roads are a vital part of the farm production programs and farmers need help to keep them built and improved."

The lengthy report was signed by Albert O'Neal, chairman of the County PMA Committee; Soil Conservationist Martin Gordon and County Agent R. F. McHenry.

Dry Weather

Meanwhile County Farm Agent Ralph F. McHenry said there is still hope that the winter wheat crop may be planted in time.

If enough rain falls in the next month or so, he explained, the earth will be moist enough for planting. Most of the winter crop is planted in October.

Central High School in Lonaconing reopened yesterday morning after closing at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday due to lack of water.

Rainfall in the past two months has totaled only 2.3 inches, 1.08 inches in August and 1.22 in September. August was the third driest since 1871, and the normal September figure is 2.72 inches. Last year it was 6.11 inches.

Very little immediate relief was offered by the Weather Bureau's forecast for today. Cloudy skies and scattered showers are expected, but no soaking rains are foreseen.

Flagship of his fleet was the "Potomac Queen," a sternwheeler, the largest vessel ever to navigate this section of the river.

Mr. Dreyer's only son, Frederick C. Dreyer, Jr., was killed November 16, 1925, while working on a bridge construction job at Ambridge, Pa.

Charles Herbert Staggs, 19, of RFD No. 1, Keyser, W. Va., was admitted to Potomac Valley Hospital in Keyser Tuesday afternoon with injuries sustained in an automobile accident at Dawson on the McMullen Highway.

Staggs suffered a possible fractured jaw and abrasions of the head and his condition last night was reported by attaches as "fair." The youthful driver, according to state police, was traveling on Route 220 toward Keyser, when his automobile suddenly left the highway and plunged into a tree. Investigating the mishap is Trooper George Spioch of the Maryland State Police. The cause of the accident was not known last night, police said.

Farmers Urge

"Something should be done about this coal stripping business. The strip mining of coal tears up the farms. I think the USDA should handle this problem probably through SCS. They should see to it that this land is put back into usable condition."

William L. Frazee suggested that veterans on the farm and others be able to get production credit quickly for livestock and machinery.

"I would like to recommend that the Department of Agriculture either set up a new agency or through some agency already in operation, be concerned about the condition of farm to market roads," J. M. Hughes suggested. "Roads are a vital part of the farm production programs and farmers need help to keep them built and improved."

The lengthy report was signed by Albert O'Neal, chairman of the County PMA Committee; Soil Conservationist Martin Gordon and County Agent R. F. McHenry.

Dry Weather

Meanwhile County Farm Agent Ralph F. McHenry said there is still hope that the winter wheat crop may be planted in time.

If enough rain falls in the next month or so, he explained, the earth will be moist enough for planting. Most of the winter crop is planted in October.

Central High School in Lonaconing reopened yesterday morning after closing at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday due to lack of water.

Rainfall in the past two months has totaled only 2.3 inches, 1.08 inches in August and 1.22 in September. August was the third driest since 1871, and the normal September figure is 2.72 inches. Last year it was 6.11 inches.

Very little immediate relief was offered by the Weather Bureau's forecast for today. Cloudy skies and scattered showers are expected, but no soaking rains are foreseen.

"Buck" Dreyer

cessor to Smith and Dreyer. After nine years, he became sales manager of the Humbird Supply Company.

Had River Fleet

Mr. Dreyer entered politics in 1915 and was elected county treasurer.

The area west of Dingle Hill bordering the Potomac was named Dreyer's Beach. A generation ago this popular swimming place was reached only by boat and a line operated by Mr. Dreyer from Riverside Park. Flagship of his fleet was the "Potomac Queen," a stern-wheeler, the largest vessel ever to navigate this section of the river.

Mr. Dreyer's only son, Frederick C. Dreyer, Jr., was killed November 16, 1925, while working on a bridge construction job at Ambridge, Pa.

Miller Condition Remains Critical

The condition of Paul Francis Miller, 43, a driver for the Potomac Candy Company, Westernport, remained critical last night in Miners Hospital, Frostburg, where he was admitted Tuesday suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound below his heart.

Police said Miller inflicted the shot from a .22 calibre pistol belonging to Arthur Blank, Allegany. The shooting occured about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday along the highway between Shaft and Midlothian.

Promoted by the American Bible Society, this day is intended to emphasize the primary importance of the Bible as a factor in the life of the nation and the world of all churches. Rev. Fisher said he will distribute reading lists.

Among national sponsors are John Foster Dulles, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., Helen Keller, John R. Mott, J. C. Penny and Lowell Thomas.

During the period it is urged that a regular time be kept each day for Bible reading.

Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer

One of Allegany County's most colorful and unselfish citizens has died. He is Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer, veteran riverman, county official and Santa Claus to thousands of children, who succumbed Tuesday night in Memorial Hospital at the age of 71 years.

The jovial "Buck" Dreyer, county treasurer at the time of his death, was known to thousands of residents of Allegany and Garrett Counties.

While a native of Cumberland, he spent much of his time in the development and popularizing of Deep Creek Lake, now Western Maryland's No. 1 summer resort area, foreseeing the possibilities of that section when the Potomac River became too polluted for boating or swimming.

His long career saw him as a mine and mill supply firm official and owner, river man, athlete and politician.

His knowledge of the old C. and O. Canal and the Potomac River earned him the reputation of being an authority on those waterways. He had a scrapbook filled with pictures of the old canal and its activities and was a rich source of stories and facts about it.

When Dreyer's Beach was popular as a swimming spot a generation ago, Mr. Dreyer operated a boat line to the point from Riverside Park. His flagship and his pride was the "Potomac Queen," largest boat to navigate this section of the river.

Because of his familiarity with the river and his expert ability as a swimmer, Mr. Dreyer frequently was called upon in the past 55 years to supervise river rescue and river dragging operations. He always gave unstintingly of his time and labor.

Perhaps next to his love for the water was his interest in firefighting. In recent years he lived in quarters at the old Canada Hose House on North Mechanic Street, the home of Cumberland Hose Company No. 1, and was custodian of historic pieces of antique firefighting equipment. He retained his membership in the fire company, one of the oldest in this section although it had been inactive for many years.

Seldom was a parade complete without the old high wheel reel wagon and rescue truck and boats with "Buck" Dreyer at the wheel.

"Buck" Dreyer also loved children and thrilled them with stories and anecdotes. At Christmas time he played the part of Santa Claus for them at Rosenbaum's and at every charitable lodge, church, school and hospital function to which he was asked to appear.

Starting to work at the age of 12 as office boy at the McKaig foundry and machine shop, he eventually became president and general manager of the F. C. Dreyer Supply Company, Inc., here.

A steadfast Republican, Mr. Dreyer entered politics in 1915 and was elected county treasurer, holding the job for two years. In 1946 he was appointed bailiff in Cumberland People's Court by the late Governor Harry W. Nice. In 1938 he was again elected county treasurer and at the time of his death was serving his fifth term and 13th consecutive year in that position.

Although he was a staunch Republican, politics were not his principal interest in life, which he enjoyed to the fullest. He was a non-controversial figure who liked people and was everybody's friend. Western Maryland will miss him.

The Tree Surgeon

There died the other day in Asheville, N. D., James A. G. Davey, Sr. He was a member of a family notable in tree surgery and was himself one of the nation's foremost authorities on trees.

He was the man who saved the trees of Central Park, New York City, 25 years ago. Their death at the rate of 1,000 a year was popularly attributed to the exhaust gases of automobiles. Mr. Davey proved the cause was the devitalization of their soil and attacks by the European red mite, a microscopic spider. New York appropriated $1,000,000 for rehabilitation work, which Mr. Davey supervised without compensation.

The tree surgeon may be distinguished from the forester, who deals primarily with timberland. But "forester" has become the title of many tree surgeons in public employ. The tree surgeon, or tree expert, is chiefly concerned with shade and ornamental trees.

He must understand the principles of planting, pruning and bracing, the origin and treatment of diseases, the repair of decay. Many things can happen to a tree. It is subject to attack by worms and insects, especially beetles and spiders, by disease and fungus. It is vulnerable to wind and ice. Like human beings, it can suffer from nutritional deficiencies.

The growth of the profession reflects belated public recognition of the aesthetic and practical value of trees, particularly in urban and suburban areas. They take a long time to grow and they need a lot of expensive care, but they're worth it. Towns would be dreary and uncomfortable without them.

Souped-Up Drone

It is just as well that President Truman admits he was thinking of the Air Force's pilotless bomber, the Matador, among other "fantastic weapons" he mentioned in his San Francisco speech. Many persons had been left with a feeling that he had been caught up in a sort of Buck Rogers dream world of his own after hearing the Department of Defense drop some hints about the weapons of tomorrow.

Now it turns out that the Matador, at least, is something not too far ahead of laymen in their frantic efforts to understand what makes the new weapons work. It has been suggested that the Matador is, in effect, just a drone that is jet propelled and capable of carrying a good-sized load.

A drone is a radio-controlled airplane. Since the end of World War II small red drones have been used for target practice and big ones have been sent flying through atomic clouds after explosions. During the last six years the Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore has been making a blend of the radio-control and jet-engine principles, which is in production at last.

Now that the Air Force can get the things it has set up a training unit on the Florida east coast where airmen can learn to use them.

No inside information about the Matador or others of the new weapons has been revealed. This one sounds mighty effective if it can carry an atomic warhead, as doubtless it can. Just how fantastic it will prove to be will depend on many factors, including its performance in the light of that of older weapons.

How To Keep Well

Learning To Use Artificial Limbs

Skiing has a strange fascination for some persons. One of the finest surgeons in northern Wisconsin lost his leg last winter as a result of an incident related indirectly to this winter sport. The tragedy was a blow to his morale until he found he was able to ski almost as well with one leg as with two.

However, the accomplishment was not as easy as it sounds. He resumed skiing after the amputation, hoping it might teach him to walk. This may sound strange but even physicians have difficulty in obtaining an artificial limb suited to their needs and in learning to use the device.

Every ampute must go thru these two procedures and success calls for careful planning and proper coaching. The veterans administration has set up centers for this purpose because so many of our fighting men required help along this line. The civilian ampute is not always so fortunate. The average surgeon does not perform many amputations and relies upon manufacturers of artificial limbs to handle the problem after the wound has healed. Salesmen usually are amputes themselves and offer much needed tips on how the prosthesis is to be worn.

However, this was not enough for our Wisconsin surgeon; he had not received sufficient individual advice. He was disappointed; he had an artificial limb but could not use it. One day a man walked into his office and reversed the usual procedure by asking the physician what was wrong with him. The visitor was Mr. Herman Geisler, who had worked for the telephone company. He had lost both feet as a result of frostbite but was walking fine with two artificial feet. Within 15 minutes Mr. Geisler had given the surgeon enough pointers to help him walk. Mr. Geisler had been all thru this situation many times before, first as a personal experience and later with other amputes. He realized that more extensive training was needed than could be given at home or in the office. To do the job right he and his wife opened a small one story building where they are able to handle three customers at a time.

The Geislers live in front; in back, there are three bedrooms, a gymnasium, workshop, and an office. In the workshop Mr. Geisler makes prosthetic devices, using parts obtained from a recognized manufacturer. The gym is not fancy but contains parallel bars where the patient can learn to walk, first with crutches and then with the artificial extremity. There are three full length mirrors at each end of the room so that the "student" can watch himself perform. This is an important part of the treatment because all amputes sooner or later must learn to get about without looking at the ground. It amounts to developing the ability to feel, not only with the good foot but with the artificial one. The skill is further encouraged when hazards such as a two by four are placed on the ground and the trainee must step over the obstacle without looking. In this way confidence is developed and the possibility of stumbling and falling is lessened.

The course stresses a dozen or more points and, in addition, exercises are given to harden the skin and strengthen the muscles of the stump. This type of training is highly specialized and should prove most helpful to the elderly person who has lost a limb thru accident or a circulatory disorder. Oldsters require more time and encouragement and will benefit if they are willing to spend the time and effort in a hospital or with some one who knows the ropes.

TOMORROW: Dr. Van Dellen talks about the polio season.

CONGESTED LUNG

N. H. writes: What is meant by lung congestion?

REPLY

Congestion refers to swelling of tissues, combined with the excessive outpouring of mucus. This occurs in the lungs when the tissues are irritated or inflamed or when dropsy is present, caused by heart disease. Each cough brings up variable amounts of sputum.

DISTURBED NUTRITION

Mrs. F. writes: My doctor says my 11 year old son has a celiac condition. What could have caused this disorder?

REPLY

The cause is unknown and, as in other disorders of unknown etiology, infection, allergy, and emotional disturbances are listed as possible origins. Celiac disease affects youngsters and as a result, they are unable to digest starches and fats. This leads to characteristic frothy stools. It is in this malady that the banana became popular as a remedy.

LIMP AFTER LAUGHING

N. J. writes: I enjoy a good laugh but when I guffaw I become hysterical like a woman. My body weakens and I have trouble keeping from collapsing. I have never known of a good laugh having such an effect.

REPLY

Many individuals became "weak with laughter." This is a normal reaction but occasionally cataplexy is responsible. In this disturbance the person becomes limp after laughter or fright.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Democrats Scrutinize Iowa Governor's Tax Returns; Finletter Assigns Special Guard To Gen. Le May; Balloon Reaction Mounts From Czechoslovakia

WASHINGTON. — IOWA GOVERNOR'S TAXES—The problem of whether to prosecute the Republican governor of Iowa for income-tax evasion has been troubling the Democratic administration in Washington for months. At first the Treasury debated whether it should send the case to the Justice Department, finally decided to treat the matter as routine . . . The Justice Department is now giving Gov. William Beardsley a chance to come in and argue his case privately on or about October 10. This is a courtesy given every alleged tax defrauder before prosecution starts . . . What happened was that Governor Beardsley "forgot" to include income from his drugstore and his farm. Furthermore, his memory lapse continued for about four years . . . When the Treasury agent asked Beardsley for his records, the governor replied that he was "too busy"—"come back later" . . . Beardsley kept stalling and never did produce the records, so the agent went to the governor's bank where he found he had neglected to report about $50,000 over almost a four-year period ... The Treasury agent, in reporting to Washington, pointed out that the governor had made quite a few speeches about taxes, so was quite tax conscious.

REPUBLICAN SURVEY—A GOP scout friendly to Eisenhower has just finished a survey of Illinois, home bailiwick of the Chicago Tribune's Colonel McCormick and the results look good for Ike — Dope is that Werner Schroeder, long-time GOP national committeeman and stanch Tribune man, will be dropped...The Colonel also appears to be losing out in Cook County (Chicago), with Sinon Murray of Cicero likely to become the local Republican power...McCormick has been wanting to shove ex-Sen. Curley Brooks down the organization's throat as governor, but won't succeed. Ex-Congressman William Stratton will probably be the candidate instead. However, even the Republicans agree that it won't be easy to defeat popular Gov. Adlai Stevenson, Democrat. Next GOP survey for Eisenhower will be of Wisconsin.

MONKEY-WRENCH CONGRESS —The heat of the tax debate has coined a new name for this Congress —"The Monkey-Wrench Congress." ...First, Congress threw a monkey wrench into the anti-inflation program — at which time many senators argued that they would control inflation later when the tax bill came around...Now the same senators have thrown a monkey wrench into the tax bill by opening up big loopholes for special interests ...In other words, the senators kicked the lid off profits with one foot via the controls bill, then eased the taxes on these profits with the other. Nothing could help inflation more.

HE BET ON HIROHITO — in all the hosannas sung over the Japanese peace treaty and the plaudits given MacArthur, Acheson and Dulles, one man who definitely deserved a bow was not there. He is gaunt, grizzled Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan. It was Joe Grew who worked out the idea, later followed by MacArthur, of betting our money on Emperor Hirohito. Knowing their love of the Emperor, Grew figured that the Japanese would follow Hirohito when he decreed a surrender; and would also follow him if he gave the nod to us in postwar Japan. Therefore he urged a policy of emperor-cooperation...Grew also knew Hirohito was a modern common-sense individual, had traveled to Europe as a youngster, had been partially tutored by a Japanese Quaker, and was inherently against the war lords...Many people criticized Grew for this policy during the war years —among them this writer. Therefore, I should like to be among those—as I have before — to pay him tribute on the wise policy which eventually culminated in the peace treaty at San Francisco.

HARDING DEFENDED—On top of Herbert Hoover's defense of the late President Harding, Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming threw a quote from Harding into the teeth of Senators voting for special privilege in the tax bill. It showed Harding to be a man of basic idealism even though weak about carrying it out...Here is what Harding said: "..We may call to universal service every plant, agency, or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for country, and not one penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation, or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy, when one portion of our citizenship turns its activities to private gain and defensive war, while another is fighting, sacrificing, or dying for national preservation." ..Senator O'Mahoney, incidentally, has waged a tenacious fight for the little taxpayer.

BOATLESS MARINE CORPS — The U. S. Marines, who won their great fame—from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli— in crash-landing boats, may not be crash-landing anymore. At least not in boats ... The Marines want to abandon boats for helicopters ... Argument is that when the boats hit the beach, hundreds of men are lost through hidden mines. In addition, the boats make fairly easy targets for machine-gun fire as they come in, while men in dripping uniforms and gear are weighted down ... Helicopters on the other hand would fly over the beaches,

Credit Jumpers

President Truman is correct beyond criticism in his decision to keep his prime minister, Dean Acheson. He would even be justified in naming Dean Acheson as his successor if he could, because Acheson has made the foreign and domestic policies of the current administration. As our foreign commitments dominate the budget and as the budget controls all domestic affairs, our government has gradually but definitely moved, as to policy, from the White House to the State Department. It will be sound to base the 1952 campaign on a debate of the Acheson policies and achievements.

Dean Acheson is, in effect, the pivot of the administration. Were President Truman to let Dean Acheson go, it would be an admission of the failure of his administration. The President could not do that. The suggestion that Mr. Truman will have Dean Acheson with him on the train when he speaks to the country, is an evidence of political realism.

There is no reason, however, why either Truman or Acheson should go credit jumping for the Japanese treaty. That treaty is the result of the labors of General Douglas MacArthur over a prolonged period in the war. This work was implemented by the efforts of John Foster Dulles. That that was understood at the San Francisco Conference was made clear at the mere mention of General MacArthur's name. It brought the strongest applause of the evening. Whatever comes of the Japanese treaty, the credit or blame must be MacArthur's.

The credit jumper is not an extraordinary phenomenon in industry or in government. One man does a tremendous job and at the crucial moment, another, usually his superior, jumps in and grabs the credit. If the young fellow complains, he often finds himself suffering from lessened opportunity or he might even be fired.

Hurts His Favorite

When Mr. Truman does the credit jumping for Dean Acheson with regard to the Japanese treaty, he hurts his favorite because those who know the facts will wonder why anyone would want to deprive General MacArthur of the fruits of his achievements.

However, the President does not limit himself to credit jumping MacArthur; he tries to do the same as regards Herbert Hoover, attempting to give the impression that the work of the Hoover Commission was a joint operation of Herbert Hoover and Dean Acheson.

This is not true and President Truman knows it, because the differences between Hoover and Acheson were brought to the President for decision. There is, however, a record to which we can refer which clearly shows where Acheson stood with regard to the Hoover Commission's reports. Acheson concurred with eight reports; he dissented, in whole or in part, from 11 reports. This is Acheson's record:

"Report No. 1. General management of the executive branch, concurred.

"Report No. 2. Personnel management, concurred.

"Report No. 3. Office of General Services (supply activities), concurred.

"Report No. 4. The Post Office Department, concurred.

"Report No. 5. Foreign affairs, concurred.

"Report No. 6. The Department of Agriculture, two dissents.

"Report No. 7. The budget and accounting system, one dissent.

"Report No. 8. The national security organization, one dissent.

"Report No. 9. Veterans' affairs, concurred.

"Report No. 10. The Department of Commerce, one dissent.

"Report No. 11. The Treasury Department, two dissents.

"Report No. 12. Regulatory agencies, two dissents.

"Report No. 13. The Department of Labor, one dissent.

Another Dissent

"Report No. 14. The Department of the Interior, one dissent covering entire report.

"Report No. 15. Social Security, education, and Indian affairs; Social Security, one over-all dissent; education, concurred; Indian affairs, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 16. Medical activities, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 17. Federal business enterprises, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 18. Overseas administration, federal-state relations, and federal research; overseas administration, concurred; federal-state relations, over-all dissent; federal research, concurred.

"Report No. 19. Concluding report, concurred, except as to dissents noted above."

If Mr. Truman is so proud of Herbert Hoover's work, why does he prevent the full implementation of these reports? If he wants to credit jump in favor of Dean Acheson, why did the Secretary of State make it so tough for Hoover when the commission was in session? Also, why does the Post Office Department still fight the proposals for making that agency of government more efficient by modernizing its methods?

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—The "iron curtain" seems to have descended on the relations between the executive branch of the United States government and the outside world.

A new set of regulations, in the form of an official decree, has just been issue with phraseolagy as sweeping as any ever used in a dictatorship. It constitutes, as the President admits, "for the first time, uniform standards for classifying and protecting security information throughout the executive branch of the government."

But who is to say what is or is not "security information"? Why, the officials themselves, of course—the political appointees of a political administration. There is no penalty against the official or the agency of government who, under the guise of "security," may be guilty of suppressing news to which the American people are entitled.

The new decree completely cuts off the Congress of the United States as well as the entire press—except as the chief executive may permit.

Afraid To Talk

It cuts off "security information," means of communication, written or oral, between persons in the employ of the federal government and the public, unless government officials happen to know offhand what is or is not classified. Those officials will have to develop fantastic memory powers to obey the new rules. After one month of classifying hundreds of thousands of words, it will be impossible in such a maze of red tape for officials to be sure that they are not violating the President's official decree. Hence, the easiest course will be to say nothing to anybody—not even to a senator or representative—lest the ax fall on that employe for violating an executive order.

In cynical disregard of the true effect of the new regulations, the President says:

"The order applies only to officials and employes of the executive branch of the government. The public is requested to cooperate, but is under no compulsion or threat or penalty to do so as a result of this order...There is no element of censorship, either direct or implied, in this order."

Certainly there is no censorship imposed in the form of a penalty on publication itself, but there is a penalty—and a severe one—in the censoring of the news at the source.

The American people have boasted to other nations that there is a "free flow of information" in the United States and that the Constitution declares Congress shall make no law "abridging the freedom of the press."

But the President apparently can much such a law by means of an executive order bottling up at the source whatever news he wishes.

Everybody is anxious that really secret information of a military nature be suppressed. The American press through two world wars cooperated by voluntarily withholding from print all such information, whenever requested. But the new "iron curtain" order applies to every department or agency of the entire executive branch of the government, and to every single person among the more than 2,500,000 employes, no matter in what bureau or city he or she is stationed.

Granting that certain regulation are necessary to protect really secret information of a military nature, there is no reason why the Post Office Department or the Agriculture Department or the employes of the Fish and Wildlife Service or the clerks in any other department should be restricted in their telephone conversation, their letters or their communications with persons outside the government.

Lacks Checking Regulation

What is conspicuously lacking in the new regulations is a system of checking against abuse. Each department head and the subordinate he delegates to perform the task of classifying information is a law unto himself. An interdepartmental committee on internal security is provided, but has no real power of its own and it cannot exercise any effective check against abuse.

The "potential enemies" which the President fears might get information are not named, but it is suspected that perhaps the Republicans in Congress and the opposition press generally are now in that category, too.

For some strange reason, instructions are included in the "iron curtain" order specifying how classified documents shall be destroyed. It must be by burning and not necessarily in the presence or more than one official. Just why it it necessary to give orders at this time in the new regulations as to how to destroy secret public documents is hard to explain. Since there has been no uniform system of classification in effect anyhow, the problem of destruction of documents ought to be academic, at least for some years to come. It may be that the Truman administration is getting ready to purge the records of anything that 1953 may find politically damaging if there is a change to a Republican President.

The "iron curtain" regulations deserve a thorough investigation by a joint committee of Congress composed of the committees on executive expenditures. For Congress still controls the purse strings. This means control over the use of government money and over the conduct of officials who in the name of "security" would institute a complete censorship of government information at the source. This new executive order is unprecedented in American history.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON

In a courageous letter to President Truman, Henry A. Wallace has now provided the strongest documentary support for certain very grave charges previously made in this space. This letter and its enclosures contain every essential fact needed to prove that Sen. Pat McCarran's subcommittee on internal security has been taking demonstrably false testimony concerning Wallace's trip to China in the spring of 1944.

Under leading questioning by the McCarran subcommittee counsel, the semi-professional ex-Communist, Louis Budenz, testified that during this trip Wallace was "guided" along the Communist party line by the State Department official, John Carter Vincent. He further testified that Vincent was a "member of the Communist party" at that time.

On the one hand, Wallace's letter and enclosures now show that in 1944 Wallace conspicuously failed to recommend either of the great Communist party line projects of that period in China. He did not advocate American military aid for the Chinese Communists. He did not urge the President to force the Chinese Nationalists into a political coalition with the Chinese Communists.

Vincent Concurred

On the other hand, these Wallace documents also show that Wallace's main recommendations to President Roosevelt were a series of positive measures to strengthen the then-weakened government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. And they show further that John Carter Vincent, the man accused of being a "party member" and Wallace's Communist "guide," actually joined in the most drastic and important of these recommendations. This was the recommendation for the immediate replacement of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell by Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer in command in China.

In order to see how damning these documents are to the testimony taken by the MaCarran subcommittee, it is only necessary to consider a few facts about Gen. Stilwell and Gen. Wedemeyer.

On the political side, Gen. Stilwell's interventions in the internal politics of the Chungking government had led, in ways too complex to explain in detail, to the total triumph of the most inefficient and reactionary faction of the Kuomintang. And this had served the Communists by producing unspeakable demoralization and decay among the Nationalists. Equally, on the military side, Gen. Stilwell's whole aim was to fight the Japanese in Burma, and to draw into Burma all American and Chinese military resources. And this had served the Communists even more importantly, by leaving the armies of the Generalissimo in China, which were never given a pound of American military supplies, exposed to a series of crushing defeats by the Japanese.

In addition, Gen. Stilwell was possessed—it is the only word—by a venomous personal hatred of Chiang Kai-shek. He warmly admired the Chinese Communists, and wished to give them American military aid, while continuing to hold down aid to Chiang. And he was already working to gain these ends when Wallace cabled Roosevelt about him. The great weakness of the Generalissimo's government, resulting from its military defeats in East China, was to be exploited in order to extort vast new powers for Stilwell. Among these powers was to be absolute authority to distribute American military equipment within China, which in turn was to permit Stilwell to give out arms to the Communists.

As a result of Gen. Stilwell's singularly distorted reports to Washington, Maj. Gen. Patrick Hurley was actually sent to Chungking a couple of months after the Wallace visit, to persuade Chiang Kai-shek to grant to Stilwell these desired new powers. Stilwell's mood and purposes are clearly revealed by one of his contemporary diary notes about Hurley's negotiations as follows: "September 16: The g-mo (generalissimo) insists on control (of distribution of military supplies). Our stuff that we are giving him! T. V. (Soong) says we must remember the 'dignity' of a great nation . . . Pat (Hurley) told him 'horsefeathers' . . . If the g-mo controls distribution, I am sunk. The Reds will get nothing. Only the g-mo's henchmen will be supplied."

Commie Hopes Fell

Hurley's efforts to gain these powers for Stilwell failed in the end for reasons which are another story, and on Chiang Kai-shek's request President Roosevelt then followed Wallace's advice to replace Stilwell with Wedemeyer. If Stilwell had continued in command, there can be no particle of doubt that the Chinese Communists would have come to power before the end of the war. Instead, the mere arrival of Gen. Wedemeyer sent a new thrill of hope and strength through the Chinese Nationalists. And although Hurley continued for some time to press the plan of Nationalist-Communist coalition, the once high war-time hopes of the Chinese Communists fell to the ground, once and for all, the day Stilwell left China.

Such are the relevant facts—all the really important facts—of this great but unhappily temporary turning point in the China story in which the Wallace trip to China in 1944 played a valuable part. What part the Wallace trip had played what part the accused man, Vincent, played on that trip, could easily have been discovered long ago by the McCarran subcommittee

Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer

One of Allegany County's most colorful and unselfish citizens has died. He is Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer, veteran riverman, county official and Santa Claus to thousands of children, who succumbed Tuesday night in Memorial Hospital at the age of 71 years.

The jovial "Buck" Dreyer, county treasurer at the time of his death, was known to thousands of residents of Allegany and Garrett Counties.

While a native of Cumberland, he spent much of his time in the development and popularizing of Deep Creek Lake, now Western Maryland's No. 1 summer resort area, foreseeing the possibilities of that section when the Potomac River became too polluted for boating or swimming.

His long career saw him as a mine and mill supply firm official and owner, river man, athlete and politician.

His knowledge of the old C. and O. Canal and the Potomac River earned him the reputation of being an authority on those waterways. He had a scrapbook filled with pictures of the old canal and its activities and was a rich source of stories and facts about it.

When Dreyer's Beach was popular as a swimming spot a generation ago, Mr. Dreyer operated a boat line to the point from Riverside Park. His flagship and his pride was the "Potomac Queen," largest boat to navigate this section of the river.

Because of his familiarity with the river and his expert ability as a swimmer, Mr. Dreyer frequently was called upon in the past 55 years to supervise river rescue and river dragging operations. He always gave unstintingly of his time and labor.

Perhaps next to his love for the water was his interest in firefighting. In recent years he lived in quarters at the old Canada Hose House on North Mechanic Street, the home of Cumberland Hose Company No. 1, and was custodian of historic pieces of antique firefighting equipment. He retained his membership in the fire company, one of the oldest in this section although it had been inactive for many years.

Seldom was a parade complete without the old high wheel reel wagon and rescue truck and boats with "Buck" Dreyer at the wheel.

"Buck" Dreyer also loved children and thrilled them with stories and anecdotes. At Christmas time he played the part of Santa Claus for them at Rosenbaum's and at every charitable lodge, church, school and hospital function to which he was asked to appear.

Starting to work at the age of 12 as office boy at the McKaig foundry and machine shop, he eventually became president and general manager of the F. C. Dreyer Supply Company, Inc., here.

A steadfast Republican, Mr. Dreyer entered politics in 1915 and was elected county treasurer, holding the job for two years. In 1946 he was appointed bailiff in Cumberland People's Court by the late Governor Harry W. Nice. In 1938 he was again elected county treasurer and at the time of his death was serving his fifth term and 13th consecutive year in that position.

Although he was a staunch Republican, politics were not his principal interest in life, which he enjoyed to the fullest. He was a non-controversial figure who liked people and was everybody's friend. Western Maryland will miss him.

The Tree Surgeon

There died the other day in Asheville, N. D., James A. G. Davey, Sr. He was a member of a family notable in tree surgery and was himself one of the nation's foremost authorities on trees.

He was the man who saved the trees of Central Park, New York City, 25 years ago. Their death at the rate of 1,000 a year was popularly attributed to the exhaust gases of automobiles. Mr. Davey proved the cause was the devitalization of their soil and attacks by the European red mite, a microscopic spider. New York appropriated $1,000,000 for rehabilitation work, which Mr. Davey supervised without compensation.

The tree surgeon may be distinguished from the forester, who deals primarily with timberland. But "forester" has become the title of many tree surgeons in public employ. The tree surgeon, or tree expert, is chiefly concerned with shade and ornamental trees.

He must understand the principles of planting, pruning and bracing, the origin and treatment of diseases, the repair of decay. Many things can happen to a tree. It is subject to attack by worms and insects, especially beetles and spiders, by disease and fungus. It is vulnerable to wind and ice. Like human beings, it can suffer from nutritional deficiencies.

The growth of the profession reflects belated public recognition of the aesthetic and practical value of trees, particularly in urban and suburban areas. They take a long time to grow and they need a lot of expensive care, but they're worth it. Towns would be dreary and uncomfortable without them.

Souped-Up Drone

It is just as well that President Truman admits he was thinking of the Air Force's pilotless bomber, the Matador, among other "fantastic weapons" he mentioned in his San Francisco speech. Many persons had been left with a feeling that he had been caught up in a sort of Buck Rogers dream world of his own after hearing the Department of Defense drop some hints about the weapons of tomorrow.

Now it turns out that the Matador, at least, is something not too far ahead of laymen in their frantic efforts to understand what makes the new weapons work. It has been suggested that the Matador is, in effect, just a drone that is jet propelled and capable of carrying a good-sized load.

A drone is a radio-controlled airplane. Since the end of World War II small red drones have been used for target practice and big ones have been sent flying through atomic clouds after explosions. During the last six years the Glenn L. Martin Company of Baltimore has been making a blend of the radio-control and jet-engine principles, which is in production at last.

Now that the Air Force can get the things it has set up a training unit on the Florida east coast where airmen can learn to use them.

No inside information about the Matador or others of the new weapons has been revealed. This one sounds mighty effective if it can carry an atomic warhead, as doubtless it can. Just how fantastic it will prove to be will depend on many factors, including its performance in the light of that of older weapons.

Learning To Use Artificial Limbs

Skiing has a strange fascination for some persons. One of the finest surgeons in northern Wisconsin lost his leg last winter as a result of an incident related indirectly to this winter sport. The tragedy was a blow to his morale until he found he was able to ski almost as well with one leg as with two.

However, the accomplishment was not as easy as it sounds. He resumed skiing after the amputation, hoping it might teach him to walk. This may sound strange but even physicians have difficulty in obtaining an artificial limb suited to their needs and in learning to use the device.

Every ampute must go thru these two procedures and success calls for careful planning and proper coaching. The veterans administration has set up centers for this purpose because so many of our fighting men required help along this line. The civilian ampute is not always so fortunate. The average surgeon does not perform many amputations and relies upon manufacturers of artificial limbs to handle the problem after the wound has healed. Salesmen usually are amputes themselves and offer much needed tips on how the prosthesis is to be worn.

However, this was not enough for our Wisconsin surgeon; he had not received sufficient individual advice. He was disappointed; he had an artificial limb but could not use it. One day a man walked into his office and reversed the usual procedure by asking the physician what was wrong with him. The visitor was Mr. Herman Geisler, who had worked for the telephone company. He had lost both feet as a result of frostbite but was walking fine with two artificial feet. Within 15 minutes Mr. Geisler had given the surgeon enough pointers to help him walk. Mr. Geisler had been all thru this situation many times before, first as a personal experience and later with other amputes. He realized that more extensive training was needed than could be given at home or in the office. To do the job right he and his wife opened a small one story building where they are able to handle three customers at a time.

The Geislers live in front; in back, there are three bedrooms, a gymnasium, workshop, and an office. In the workshop Mr. Geisler makes prosthetic devices, using parts obtained from a recognized manufacturer. The gym is not fancy but contains parallel bars where the patient can learn to walk, first with crutches and then with the artificial extremity. There are three full length mirrors at each end of the room so that the "student" can watch himself perform. This is an important part of the treatment because all amputes sooner or later must learn to get about without looking at the ground. It amounts to developing the ability to feel, not only with the good foot but with the artificial one. The skill is further encouraged when hazards such as a two by four are placed on the ground and the trainee must step over the obstacle without looking. In this way confidence is developed and the possibility of stumbling and falling is lessened.

The course stresses a dozen or more points and, in addition, exercises are given to harden the skin and strengthen the muscles of the stump. This type of training is highly specialized and should prove most helpful to the elderly person who has lost a limb thru accident or a circulatory disorder. Oldsters require more time and encouragement and will benefit if they are willing to spend the time and effort in a hospital or with some one who knows the ropes.

TOMORROW: Dr. Van Dellen talks about the polio season.

CONGESTED LUNG

N. H. writes: What is meant by lung congestion?

REPLY

Congestion refers to swelling of tissues, combined with the excessive outpouring of mucus. This occurs in the lungs when the tissues are irritated or inflamed or when dropsy is present, caused by heart disease. Each cough brings up variable amounts of sputum.

DISTURBED NUTRITION

Mrs. F. writes: My doctor says my 11 year old son has a celiac condition. What could have caused this disorder?

REPLY

The cause is unknown and, as in other disorders of unknown etiology, infection, allergy, and emotional disturbances are listed as possible origins. Celiac disease affects youngsters and as a result, they are unable to digest starches and fats. This leads to characteristic frothy stools. It is in this malady that the banana became popular as a remedy.

LIMP AFTER LAUGHING

N. J. writes: I enjoy a good laugh but when I guffaw I become hysterical like a woman. My body weakens and I have trouble keeping from collapsing. I have never known of a good laugh having such an effect.

REPLY

Many individuals became "weak with laughter." This is a normal reaction but occasionally cataplexy is responsible. In this disturbance the person becomes limp after laughter or fright.

Democrats Scrutinize Iowa Governor's Tax Returns; Finletter Assigns Special Guard To Gen. Le May; Balloon Reaction Mounts From Czechoslovakia

WASHINGTON. — IOWA GOVERNOR'S TAXES—The problem of whether to prosecute the Republican governor of Iowa for income-tax evasion has been troubling the Democratic administration in Washington for months. At first the Treasury debated whether it should send the case to the Justice Department, finally decided to treat the matter as routine . . . The Justice Department is now giving Gov. William Beardsley a chance to come in and argue his case privately on or about October 10. This is a courtesy given every alleged tax defrauder before prosecution starts . . . What happened was that Governor Beardsley "forgot" to include income from his drugstore and his farm. Furthermore, his memory lapse continued for about four years . . . When the Treasury agent asked Beardsley for his records, the governor replied that he was "too busy"—"come back later" . . . Beardsley kept stalling and never did produce the records, so the agent went to the governor's bank where he found he had neglected to report about $50,000 over almost a four-year period ... The Treasury agent, in reporting to Washington, pointed out that the governor had made quite a few speeches about taxes, so was quite tax conscious.

REPUBLICAN SURVEY—A GOP scout friendly to Eisenhower has just finished a survey of Illinois, home bailiwick of the Chicago Tribune's Colonel McCormick and the results look good for Ike — Dope is that Werner Schroeder, long-time GOP national committeeman and stanch Tribune man, will be dropped...The Colonel also appears to be losing out in Cook County (Chicago), with Sinon Murray of Cicero likely to become the local Republican power...McCormick has been wanting to shove ex-Sen. Curley Brooks down the organization's throat as governor, but won't succeed. Ex-Congressman William Stratton will probably be the candidate instead. However, even the Republicans agree that it won't be easy to defeat popular Gov. Adlai Stevenson, Democrat. Next GOP survey for Eisenhower will be of Wisconsin.

MONKEY-WRENCH CONGRESS —The heat of the tax debate has coined a new name for this Congress —"The Monkey-Wrench Congress." ...First, Congress threw a monkey wrench into the anti-inflation program — at which time many senators argued that they would control inflation later when the tax bill came around...Now the same senators have thrown a monkey wrench into the tax bill by opening up big loopholes for special interests ...In other words, the senators kicked the lid off profits with one foot via the controls bill, then eased the taxes on these profits with the other. Nothing could help inflation more.

HE BET ON HIROHITO — in all the hosannas sung over the Japanese peace treaty and the plaudits given MacArthur, Acheson and Dulles, one man who definitely deserved a bow was not there. He is gaunt, grizzled Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan. It was Joe Grew who worked out the idea, later followed by MacArthur, of betting our money on Emperor Hirohito. Knowing their love of the Emperor, Grew figured that the Japanese would follow Hirohito when he decreed a surrender; and would also follow him if he gave the nod to us in postwar Japan. Therefore he urged a policy of emperor-cooperation...Grew also knew Hirohito was a modern common-sense individual, had traveled to Europe as a youngster, had been partially tutored by a Japanese Quaker, and was inherently against the war lords...Many people criticized Grew for this policy during the war years —among them this writer. Therefore, I should like to be among those—as I have before — to pay him tribute on the wise policy which eventually culminated in the peace treaty at San Francisco.

HARDING DEFENDED—On top of Herbert Hoover's defense of the late President Harding, Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming threw a quote from Harding into the teeth of Senators voting for special privilege in the tax bill. It showed Harding to be a man of basic idealism even though weak about carrying it out...Here is what Harding said: "...We may call to universal service every plant, agency, or facility, all in the sublime sacrifice for country, and not one penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individual, corporation, or combination, but all above the normal shall flow into the defense chest of the nation. There is something inherently wrong, something out of accord with the ideals of representative democracy, when one portion of our citizenship turns its activities to private gain and defensive war, while another is fighting, sacrificing, or dying for national preservation." ..Senator O'Mahoney, incidentally, has waged a tenacious fight for the little taxpayer.

BOATLESS MARINE CORPS — The U. S. Marines, who won their great fame—from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli— in crash-landing boats, may not be crash-landing anymore. At least not in boats ... The Marines want to abandon boats for helicopters ... Argument is that when the boats hit the beach, hundreds of men are lost through hidden mines. In addition, the boats make fairly easy targets for machine-gun fire as they come in, while men in dripping uniforms and gear are weighted down ... Helicopters on the other hand would fly over the beaches.

Credit Jumpers

President Truman is correct beyond criticism in his decision to keep his prime minister, Dean Acheson. He would even be justified in naming Dean Acheson as his successor if he could, because Acheson has made the foreign and domestic policies of the current administration. As our foreign commitments dominate the budget and as the budget controls all domestic affairs, our government has gradually but definitely moved, as to policy, from the White House to the State Department. It will be sound to base the 1952 campaign on a debate of the Acheson policies and achievements.

Dean Acheson is, in effect, the pivot of the administration. Were President Truman to let Dean Acheson go, it would be an admission of the failure of his administration. The President could not do that. The suggestion that Mr. Truman will have Dean Acheson with him on the train when he speaks to the country, is an evidence of political realism.

There is no reason, however, why either Truman or Acheson should go credit jumping for the Japanese treaty. That treaty is the result of the labors of General Douglas MacArthur over a prolonged period in the war. This work was implemented by the efforts of John Foster Dulles. That that was understood at the San Francisco Conference was made clear at the mere mention of General MacArthur's name. It brought the strongest applause of the evening. Whatever comes of the Japanese treaty, the credit or blame must be MacArthur's.

The credit jumper is not an extraordinary phenomenon in industry or in government. One man does a tremendous job and at the crucial moment, another, usually his superior, jumps in and grabs the credit. If the young fellow complains, he often finds himself suffering from lessened opportunity or he might even be fired.

Hurts His Favorite

When Mr. Truman does the credit jumping for Dean Acheson with regard to the Japanese treaty, he hurts his favorite because those who know the facts will wonder why anyone would want to deprive General MacArthur of the fruits of his achievements.

However, the President does not limit himself to credit jumping MacArthur; he tries to do the same as regards Herbert Hoover, attempting to give the impression that the work of the Hoover Commission was a joint operation of Herbert Hoover and Dean Acheson.

This is not true and President Truman knows it, because the differences between Hoover and Acheson were brought to the President for decision. There is, however, a record to which we can refer which clearly shows where Acheson stood with regard to the Hoover Commission's reports. Acheson concurred with eight reports; he dissented, in whole or in part, from 11 reports. This is Acheson's record:

"Report No. 1. General management of the executive branch, concurred.

"Report No. 2. Personnel management, concurred.

"Report No. 3. Office of General Services (supply activities), concurred.

"Report No. 4. The Post Office Department, concurred.

"Report No. 5. Foreign affairs, concurred.

"Report No. 6. The Department of Agriculture, two dissents.

"Report No. 7. The budget and accounting system, one dissent.

"Report No. 8. The national security organization, one dissent.

"Report No. 9. Veterans' affairs, concurred.

"Report No. 10. The Department of Commerce, one dissent.

"Report No. 11. The Treasury Department, two dissents.

"Report No. 12. Regulatory agencies, two dissents.

"Report No. 13. The Department of Labor, one dissent.

Another Dissent

"Report No. 14. The Department of the Interior, one dissent covering entire report.

"Report No. 15. Social Security, education, and Indian affairs; Social Security, one over-all dissent; education, concurred; Indian affairs, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 16. Medical activities, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 17. Federal business enterprises, one over-all dissent.

"Report No. 18. Overseas administration, federal-state relations, and federal research; overseas administration, concurred; federal-state relations, over-all dissent; federal research, concurred.

"Report No. 19. Concluding report, concurred, except as to dissents noted above."

If Mr. Truman is so proud of Herbert Hoover's work, why does he prevent the full implementation of these reports? If he wants to credit jump in favor of Dean Acheson, why did the Secretary of State make it so tough for Hoover when the commission was in session? Also, why does the Post Office Department still fight the proposals for making that agency of government more efficient by modernizing its methods?

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—The "iron curtain" seems to have descended on the relations between the executive branch of the United States government and the outside world.

A new set of regulations, in the form of an official decree, has just been issue with phraseology as sweeping as any ever used in a dictatorship. It constitutes, as the President admits, "for the first time, uniform standards for classifying and protecting security information throughout the executive branch of the government."

But who is to say what is or is not "security information"? Why, the officials themselves, of course—the political appointees of a political administration. There is no penalty against the official or the agency of government who, under the guise of "security," may be guilty of suppressing news to which the American people are entitled.

The new decree completely cuts off the Congress of the United States as well as the entire press—except as the chief executive may permit.

Afraid To Talk

It cuts off "security information," means of communication, written or oral, between persons in the employ of the federal government and the public, unless government officials happen to know offhand what is or is not classified. Those officials will have to develop fantastic memory powers to obey the new rules. After one month of classifying hundreds of thousands of words, it will be impossible in such a maze of red tape for officials to be sure that they are not violating the President's official decree. Hence, the easiest course will be to say nothing to anybody—not even to a senator or representative—lest the ax fall on that employe for violating an executive order.

In cynical disregard of the true effect of the new regulations, the President says:

"The order applies only to officials and employes of the executive branch of the government. The public is requested to cooperate, but is under no compulsion or threat or penalty to do so as a result of this order...There is no element of censorship, either direct or implied, in this order."

Certainly there is no censorship imposed in the form of a penalty on publication itself, but there is a penalty—and a severe one—in the censoring of the news at the source.

The American people have boasted to other nations that there is a "free flow of information" in the United States and that the Constitution declares Congress shall make no law "abridging the freedom of the press."

But the President apparently can much such a law by means of an executive order bottling up at the source whatever news he wishes.

Everybody is anxious that really secret information of a military nature be suppressed. The American press through two world wars cooperated by voluntarily withholding from print all such information, whenever requested. But the new "iron curtain" order applies to every department or agency of the entire executive branch of the government, and to every single person among the more than 2,500,000 employes, no matter in what bureau or city he or she is stationed.

Granting that certain regulatio are necessary to protect really secret information of a military nature, there is no reason why the Post Office Department or the Agriculture Department or the employes of the Fish and Wildlife Service or the clerks in any other department should be restricted in their telephone conversation, their letters or their communications with persons outside the government.

Lacks Checking Regulation

What is conspicuously lacking in the new regulations is a system of checking against abuse. Each department head and the subordinate he delegates to perform the task of classifying information is a law unto himself. An interdepartmental committee on internal security is provided, but has no real power of its own and it cannot exercise any effective check against abuse.

The "potential enemies" which the President fears might get information are not named, but it is suspected that perhaps the Republicans in Congress and the opposition press generally are now in that category, too.

For some strange reason, instructions are included in the "iron curtain" order specifying how classified documents shall be destroyed. It must be by burning and not necessarily in the presence or more than one official. Just why it it necessary to give orders at this time in the new regulations as to how to destroy secret public documents is hard to explain. Since there has been no uniform system of classification in effect anyhow, the problem of destruction of documents ought to be academic, at least for some years to come. It may be that the Truman administration is getting ready to purge the records of anything that 1953 may find politically damaging if there is a change to a Republican President.

The "iron curtain" regulations deserve a thorough investigation by a joint committee of Congress composed of the committees on executive expenditures. For Congress still controls the purse strings. This means control over the use of government money and over the conduct of officials who in the name of "security" would institute a complete censorship of government information at the source. This new executive order is unprecedented in American history.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON

In a courageous letter to President Truman, Henry A. Wallace has now provided the strongest documentary support for certain very grave charges previously made in this space. This letter and its enclosures contain every essential fact needed to prove that Sen. Pat McCarran's subcommittee on internal security has been taking demonstrably false testimony concerning Wallace's trip to China in the spring of 1944.

Under leading questioning by the McCarran subcommittee counsel, the semi-professional ex-Communist, Louis Budenz, testified that during this trip Wallace was "guided" along the Communist party line by the State Department official, John Carter Vincent. He further testified that Vincent was a "member of the Communist party" at that time.

On the one hand, Wallace's letter and enclosures now show that in 1944 Wallace conspicuously failed to recommend either of the great Communist party line projects of that period in China. He did not advocate American military aid for the Chinese Communists. He did not urge the President to force the Chinese Nationalists into a political coalition with the Chinese Communists.

Vincent Concurred

On the other hand, these Wallace documents also show that Wallace's main recommendations to President Roosevelt were a series of positive measures to strengthen the then-weakened government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. And they show further that John Carter Vincent, the man accused of being a "party member" and Wallace's Communist "guide," actually joined in the most drastic and important of these recommendations. This was the recommendation for the immediate replacement of Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell by Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer in command in China.

In order to see how damning these documents are to the testimony taken by the MaCarran subcommittee, it is only necessary to consider a few facts about Gen. Stilwell and Gen. Wedemeyer.

On the political side, Gen. Stilwell's interventions in the internal politics of the Chungking government had led, in ways too complex to explain in detail, to the total triumph of the most inefficient and reactionary faction of the Kuomintang. And this had served the Communists by producing unspeakable demoralization and decay among the Nationalists. Equally, on the military side, Gen. Stilwell's whole aim was to fight the Japanese in Burma, and to draw into Burma all American and Chinese military resources. And this had served the Communists even more importantly, by leaving the armies of the Generalissimo in China, which were never given a pound of American military supplies, exposed to a series of crushing defeats by the Japanese.

In addition, Gen. Stilwell was possessed—it is the only word—by a venomous personal hatred of Chiang Kai-shek. He warmly admired the Chinese Communists, and wished to give them American military aid, while continuing to hold down aid to Chiang. And he was already working to gain these ends when Wallace cabled Roosevelt about him. The great weakness of the Generalissimo's government, resulting from its military defeats in East China, was to be exploited in order to extort vast new powers for Stilwell. Among these powers was to be absolute authority to distribute American military equipment within China, which in turn was to permit Stilwell to give our arms to the Communists.

As a result of Gen. Stilwell's singularly distorted reports to Washington, Maj. Gen. Patrick Hurley was actually sent to Chungking a couple of months after the Wallace visit, to persuade Chiang Kai-shek to grant to Stilwell these desired new powers. Stilwell's moods and purposes are clearly revealed by one of his contemporary diaries notes about Hurley's negotiations as follows: "September 16: The g-mo (generalissimo) insists on control (of distribution of military supplies). Our stuff that we are giving him! T. V. (Soong) says we must remember the 'dignity' of a great nation . . . Pat (Hurley) told him 'horsefeathers' . . . If the g-mo controls distribution, I am sunk. The Reds will get nothing. Only the g-mo's henchmen will be supplied."

Commie Hopes Fell

Hurley's efforts to gain these powers for Stilwell failed in the end for reasons which are another story, and on Chiang Kai-shek's request President Roosevelt then followed Wallace's advice to replace Stilwell with Wedemeyer. If Stilwell had continued in command, there can be no particle of doubt that the Chinese Communists would have come to power before the end of the war. Instead, the mere arrival of Gen. Wedemeyer sent a new thrill of hope and strength through the Chinese Nationalists. And although Hurley continued for some time to press the plan of Nationalist-Communist coalition, the once high war-time hopes of the Chinese Communists fell to the ground, once and for all, the day Stilwell left China.

Such are the relevant facts—all the really important facts—of this great but unhappily temporary turning point in the China story in which the Wallace trip to China in 1944 played a valuable part. What part the Wallace trip had played what part the accused man, Vincent, played on that trip, could easily have been discovered long ago by the McCarran subcommittee

Valley Street Repaving In Flood Project Starts

Work has been started by the Cumberland Contracting Company on the repaving of a part of Valley Street which has been torn up approximately a year due to the flood control project.

The street has been widened and pouring of concrete for the base between North Mechanic Street and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing is expected to start Friday. After the base has been laid, the street will be blacktopped, a Cumberland Contracting Company spokesman said.

New sidewalks and curbing have already been constructed between Mechanic and the railroad and workmen are expected to start soon on the laying of walks on the north side off Valley and Furnace Streets between Henderson Avenue and Lena Street.

Walks and curbing have been installed around the parkway at the intersection of Valley and Furnace Streets and additional walks will be placed in the park. The pressure conduit, largest in the system, goes through the park.

The section of Valley and Furnace Streets east of Henderson Avenue, torn up almost two years ago, has been blacktopped since last December.

Selective Service Office Changes Hours

Hours at the Selective Service Office in the Union Street Building will be changed Monday effective with the changeover from daylight time.

P. Emmett Fahey, local draft board co-ordinator, said the new hours will be from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m., Monday through Friday. Present daylight time hours are from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Civil Defense Block Wardens Are Needed

The greatest need for volunteers in the county Civil Defense program may be found in the civil defense officer or block warden classification.

It is to these men that falls the duty of bringing to each home the training and educational program necessary for a successful Civil Defense setup.

Within Allegany county, the mayor of each incorporated town or an interested civic group in these incorporated towns have appointed the chief civil defense officer. The mission of these individuals is to enlist volunteers for their organization and to organize their communities as requirements dictate.

William G. Barger, the county director of civil defense, said generally the communities are divided into areas such as wards or precincts, each with a leader.

The ultimate in organization, Barger said, is to have one civil defense officer per block (corresponding to block warden) or equivalent area.

Barger said persons without special qualifications and others, such as housewives, are urged to contact the chief civil defense officer in each town to enlist in the vital program.

"The training and organization we perfect today may save the lives of our neighbor tomorrow, not only in the event of military attack, but in case of fire, flood or other natural catastrophes," Barger asserted.

In the area, here is the defense officer organization:

Barton—Mayor, A. P. Hoffa; Civil Defense Officer, C. C. Keyes, address, Barton.

Cumberland — Mayor, Thomas S. Post; Civil Defense Officer, Arthur B. Gibson; address, City Hall, Cumberland.

Frostburg—Mayor, Jesse Jacobs; Civil Defense Officer, S. W. Green; address, 326 East Main Street, Frostburg.

Lonaconing — Mayor, Virgil A. Alexander; Civil Defense Officer, F. L. Stoudt; address, East Main Street, Lonaconing.

Luke—Mayor, C. S. Dayton; Civil Defense Officer, F. L. Davis; address, 301 Platt Street, Luke.

Midland—Mayor, Verl Ash; Civil Defense Officer, W. E. Ross; address, Midland.

Oldtown—Civil Defense Officers, I. G. Lewis and John Lewis, address, Oldtown.

Westernport — Mayor, G. P. Kight; Civil Defense Officer, B. V. Kooken; address, Johnson Street, Westernport.

In the early days of the New York City elevated trains, which were powered by steam engines, housewives, angered because soot blackened their laundry, sometimes hurled bricks at the engineers.

Flying a national flag upside down at sea is the international distress signal.

Within Allegany county, the mayor of each incorporated town or an interested civic group in these incorporated towns have appointed the chief civil defense officer. The mission of these individuals is to enlist volunteers for their organization and to organize their communities as requirements dictate.

William G. Barger, the county director of civil defense, said generally the communities are divided into areas such as wards or precincts, each with a leader.

The ultimate in organization, Barger said, is to have one civil defense officer per block (corresponding to block warden) or equivalent area.

Barger said persons without special qualifications and others, such as housewives, are urged to contact the chief civil defense officer in each town to enlist in the vital program.

"The training and organization we perfect today may save the lives of our neighbor tomorrow, not only in the event of military attack, but in case of fire, flood or other natural catastrophes," Barger asserted.

In the area, here is the defense officer organization:

Barton—Mayor, A. P. Hoffa; Civil Defense Officer, C. C. Keyes, address, Barton.

Cumberland — Mayor, Thomas S. Post; Civil Defense Officer, Arthur B. Gibson; address, City Hall, Cumberland.

Frostburg—Mayor, Jesse Jacobs; Civil Defense Officer, S. W. Green; address, 326 East Main Street, Frostburg.

Lonaconing — Mayor, Virgil A. Alexander; Civil Defense Officer, F. L. Stoudt; address, East Main Street, Lonaconing.

Luke—Mayor, C. S. Dayton; Civil Defense Officer, F. L. Davis; address, 301 Platt Street, Luke.

Midland—Mayor, Verl Ash; Civil Defense Officer, W. E. Ross; address, Midland.

Oldtown—Civil Defense Officers, I. G. Lewis and John Lewis, address, Oldtown.

Westernport — Mayor, G. P. Kight; Civil Defense Officer, B. V. Kooken; address, Johnson Street, Westernport.

In the early days of the New York City elevated trains, which were powered by steam engines, housewives, angered because soot blackened their laundry, sometimes hurled bricks at the engineers.

Flying a national flag upside down at sea is the international distress signal.

IT MUST BE GOOD!

WANT TO KNOW WHY we sell so many millions of cans of Rival? Look at any Rival-fed dog — big or little, pup or patriarch.

NOW WATCH HIM EAT. See him "jet-propel" himself up to his dish of Rival, with his tail telling the world: "This I like!" Yet this may be the "Fussy Fido" or "Hard-to-please Hector" who turned up a haughty nose at other foods. The secret? It's the nourishing ingredients in the Rival formula—plus the Rival flavor—a natural flavor, never artificially "doctored" or flavored.

RIVAL'S SUCCESS with dog owners and their dogs came about through the Rival idea. You see it in the modern Rival plant, spotless as your own kitchen, and the Rival laboratories, which double-check every ingredient. In the Rival Kennels, dogs fed only on Rival prove, by their splendid condition, that your dog too can have new beauty of coat, solid bone and muscle, and a world of vitality.

YOU CAN BANK ON RIVAL—and you can bank the savings you make on Rival's thrifty price!

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—This is a letter to Miss Judy Gregory of Detroit, Mich., who one day will come to New York. It will be a vague letter, a confused letter—because I do not know whether to tell Miss Judy to come or stay away.

Miss Judy is almost 16. A few days ago she was living in Coldwater, Mich., from where she wrote me a fan letter about a recent column. This is the breath of life for any writer, and Miss Judy now is my ward, my protege, my exquisite midwestern jewel to be defended to the death.

However, if Miss Judy is unique in recognizing the talents of a skilled man of letters, she is one of many when she goes on to say, in the old familiar words, "I have never been to New York, but all my life . . ." and "I realize that New York is different from any other . . ." and "I read everything I can get about New York and I have several records such as Manhattan Serenade . . ." The words ring with a thousand echoes, and they are as sad as the songs of Solomon, as tender and heartbreaking as a day in spring.

This is a legion of the prematurely damned, to which Miss Judy belongs. Someone, somewhere—an actor, a writer, a painter, a photographer—has drawn for them a picture of this city, my city, and the world never has been the same. The seed is sown. The kids drop into Joe's on the corner of Main and Market for their hamburgers and cokes—and this one spins lazily on a stool and dreams of visiting El Morocco on Peter Arno's arm.

The country club holds its big spring dance, and this one suffers to be guided around the floor by a gauche juvenile, while in her mind she is floating around the St. Regis Roof with the eyes of the Four Hundred on her, and poor little old Wallis Windsor neglected in a corner.

She goes home to her airy little upstairs bedroom, with the amiable young-girl wallpaper selected by her mother and detested bitterly by her, and she fancies herself seated gracefully before a roaring fire in the living room of her Park Avenue penthouse, with the vic playing Clair de Lune, a bearskin rug at her feet and a terribly dashing, terribly handsome suitor telling her he can't live without her.

This autumn, some of them will come. Some are here now; as I write, they are stepping off trains, planes and autos to begin the big adventure. This is this autumn's freshman class. They are from 16 to 22 and the world behind them is forgotten, like a slate wiped clean. Now they have begun to live. I am being conservative when I say that in two years, seven out of each 10 will be back in Cleveland or Akron or Memphis or South Bend, picking up the pieces.

• — • — •

New York gives to its settler what E. B. White has called "the gift of privacy, the jewel of loneliness." Seven of each 10 find it is what they thought they wanted—and don't. They will find the city cold and dirty and greedy, interested only casually in their freshness and faith, indifferent to their dreams. Privacy and loneliness, they find, are romantic, empty words to them—and when they have cried enough and hated it enough, they will pack their laundry mailing cases and go home.

The other three will stay . . . the square pegs who have found the square hole, the misshapen dreamers who have come across Ultima Thule, the hopelessly lost who know darkly and sadly that after this emotional binge, there is no going back to the Saturday night date with the boy back home. "Commuters," Mr. White has said, "give the city its tidal restlessness; natives give it solidity and continuity; but the settlers give it passion."

Should I tell Miss Judy to stay away? To keep the dream, to marry the boy back home, to be wistful always about her lost city?

How can I? I am writing in the dark of the city evening. The air comes cool and fresh from the river; a radio in somebody's apartment somewhere is playing La Mer. Below me the cars unwind like the coils of a beautiful snake, and far to the south the downtown lights glisten like the towers of a fairybook storyland.

The faint, wonderful drone of the city comes up to my windows and my little blue china bear sits on the sill and meditates gravely on the endless scribble of rooftops. Somewhere in the asphalt jungle a poem is being written, a knife thrown, a symphony played, a girl kissed, a man murdered. In the city below me, they are acting out the divine comedy of life, raucous and beautiful. Shall I tell Miss Judy to stay away, this is not for you? Because if it isn't what is?

Ah, Miss Judy. I have come to the bottom of my letter and I have told you nothing. Can you come, perhaps, but leave your heart home? No, I didn't think so. Well, then—come if you must. Fasten everything tight, cover your soul with cellophane, grit your teeth — and come then, for the ride of your life. Once seen, never forgotten. All for the price of a thin dime . . . hurry, hurry, hurry. . . .

Line up your torso for beauty and you'll make real strides toward litheness and gracefulness!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

The ability to be objective about oneself is a great advantage. If you can see yourself as others see you, you can make great strides in your campaign for self improvement. It's a capacity that anyone can acquire if he or she will just set aside a few minutes each week to honestly evaluate personal qualities, both good and bad. The sad thing is that too few are willing.

Important Discoveries

Here's one of the evaluations that can be made in that manner. Are others impressed with your litheness, flexibility and gracefulness? Or do they see rounded shoulders, a crooked neck, or a dowager's hump when they look at you. Look at your side view in a full length mirror. If you study your reflection as though it were someone you never have met, the answer will be apparent.

The difference between a good and bad answer to those questions lies in your body line-up. Any flaws prove that bad habits have caused the various parts of your body to align in an unnatural relationship, thereby making beauty impossible . . . that is, until you replace your bad habits with good ones.

And this is something you can do easily. The benefits are so vastly worthwhile that it is difficult to understand why anyone would pass up the opportunity to acquire them.

If you wish to get your torso into a beauty line-up, use these exercises to spur your thrust toward better habits:

Beauty Habits

1. Sit with your arms outstretched at shoulder level. Hold your head high. Circle your arms behind your shoulders as far back as you can reach, first forward and then backward. Twenty-five times in each direction.

2. Sit cross-legged with your wrists crossed in your lap. Fling your arms up and well behind the shoulders. At the same time, let your head drop as far back as possible. Fifteen times daily.

Teach your body these streamlining ways. Soon you will see your best self in your mirror—and you'll be seeing yourself as others see you at the same time!

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

OMAHA, Sept. 26 (INS)—So suppose it suddenly drops on New York, on Washington, or Chicago, or Pittsburgh's steel, or Detroit's tool shop, or the places on the coast where they punch out airplanes, or London, Paris, Kalamazoo.

We then would be in A-war 1 (no doubt the first of a series) and the most important city in the free world would promptly become this place, Omaha. For SAC is at Omaha. SAC, of course, Strategic Air Command.

SAC is not easy to write about. It is that special branch of the Air Force which would have first grabs on the A-bomb stockpile in case we had to get off the deck and start fighting back. It would reply to an A-bomb attack in kind.

And, we hastily add, how!

We were able to bomb Tokyo and two or three other Japanese cities within five months after the successful orders went from that capital to bomb Pearl Harbor. This, of course, was the ever-dramatic Doolittle raid from the deck of the carrier Hornet. About six tons of high explosives was dropped on Tokyo itself in the course of that intrepid adventure, and we were not able to go back to Tokyo to bomb it until Rosey O'Donnell led the 29's there in June of 1944.

If we and our friends had a king-sized Pearl Harbor, let's say four minutes and 12 seconds from now, and it was inspired by (let's hazard a preposterous guess and say) Russia, the retaliation would be the swiftest, surest and most appaling in the history of man.

SAC could launch an A-bomb counterattack from several points in the U. S. by means of the B-36 and from a known but hardly printable array of air fields elsewhere in the free world. Some of those fields are within canary flying distance of Russian targets. Other targets would need the full range of the 36, but the effect would be the same—once there.

The Doolittle B-25's, with the old man himself at the wheel of one of them, and interpid yound men like Ted Lawson at the sticks of those that followed, had such a sobering effect on the Japanese brass—with those six tons—that hundreds of Jap fighter planes were pulled in from the outer reaches of the nation's aggressive path and were assigned to protect the home islands, a move which took them off the backs of GI's slugging back through the stinking jungle, several thousand miles away.

One SAC bomber—one—dropped one modern bomb—one—on a Russian target could wreak as much havoc at 50,000 B-25's of Jimmy Doolittle's period. Yes, 50,000.

It is an unpardonable presumption to attempt to expand on a Churchillian conception of our times, but it is not Russia's fear of our A-bomb stockpile which has been the deterrent. It is Russia's fear of SAC's ability to move some of that stockpile to Soviet targets. That fear may be behind the Soviet Union's concentration on fine (and they are fine) jet interceptors, instead of long-range bombers.

But SAC is not a robot thing. it is airpower that springs from talented young manpower; manpower that still must go to the PX and is occasionally tempted to go AWOL, and which has its other tribulations. It is the most modern arm of the entire defense pattern and the one which would be called upon within minutes—not months or years—after an attack. There's no question about it, Gen. Curt LeMay has the finest, toughest young armed force in our annals.

Whether they could follow up the tremendous Sunday punch they could throw is debatable. They still need more planes, more bombs, more men, and they'll always need more training. Theirs is a fantastically complicated business, made up of plans not only to deliver the bomb but follow it up—at a specific time—with paper clips to handle the desk work at advance bases. In the meantime, SAC keeps the uncertain peace (if this is peace) and don't let anybody tell you different.

Scientific tests show that a lesson is learned more thoroughly if it is learned slowly.

NEW YORK—This is a letter to Miss Judy Gregory of Detroit, Mich., who one day will come to New York. It will be a vague letter, a confused letter—because I do not know whether to tell Miss Judy to come or stay away.

Miss Judy is almost 16. A few days ago she was living in Coldwater, Mich., from where she wrote me a fan letter about a recent column. This is the breath of life for any writer, and Miss Judy now is my ward, my protege, my exquisite mid-western jewel to be defended to the death.

However, if Miss Judy is unique in recognizing the talents of a skilled man of letters, she is one of many when she goes on to say, in the old familiar words, "I have never been to New York, but all my life . . ." and "I realize that New York is different from any other . . ." and "I read everything I can get about New York and I have several records such as Manhattan Serenade . . ." The words ring with a thousand echoes, and they are as sad as the songs of Solomon, as tender and heartbreaking as a day in spring.

This is a legion of the prematurely damned, to which Miss Judy belongs. Someone, somewhere—an actor, a writer, a painter, a photographer—has drawn for them a picture of this city, my city, and the world never has been the same. The seed is sown. The kids drop into Joe's on the corner of Main and Market for their hamburgers and cokes—and this one spins lazily on a stool and dreams of visiting El Morocco on Peter Arno's arm.

The country club holds its big spring dance, and this one suffers to be guided around the floor by a gauche juvenile, while in her mind she is floating around the St. Regis Roof with the eyes of the Four Hundred on her, and poor little old Wallis Windsor neglected in a corner.

She goes home to her airy little upstairs bedroom, with the amiable young-girl wallpaper selected by her mother and detested bitterly by her, and she fancies herself seated gracefully before a roaring fire in the living room of her Park Avenue penthouse, with the vic playing Clair de Lune, a bearskin rug at her feet and a terribly dashing, terribly handsome suitor telling her he can't live without her.

This autumn, some of them will come. Some are here now; as I write, they are stepping off trains, planes and autos to begin the big adventure. This is this autumn's freshman class. They are from 16 to 22 and the world behind them is forgotten, like a slate wiped clean. Now they have begun to live. I am being conservative when I say that in two years, seven out of each 10 will be back in Cleveland or Akron or Memphis or South Bend, picking up the pieces.

New York gives to its settler what E. B. White has called "the gift of privacy, the jewel of loneliness." Seven of each 10 find it is what they thought they wanted—and don't. They will find the city cold and dirty and greedy, interested only casually in their freshness and faith, indifferent to their dreams. Privacy and loneliness, they find, are romantic, empty words to them—and when they have cried enough and hated it enough, they will pack their laundry mailing cases and go home.

The other three will stay . . . the square pegs who have found the square hole, the misshapen dreamers who have come across Ultima Thule, the hopelessly lost who know darkly and sadly that after this emotional binge, there is no going back to the Saturday night date with the boy back home. "Commuters," Mr. White has said, "give the city its tidal restlessness; natives give it solidity and continuity; but the settlers give it passion."

Should I tell Miss Judy to stay away? To keep the dream, to marry the boy back home, to be wistful always about her lost city?

How can I? I am writing in the dark of the city evening. The air comes cool and fresh from the river; a radio in somebody's apartment somewhere is playing La Mer. Below me the cars unwind like the coils of a beautiful snake, and far to the south the downtown lights glisten like the towers of a fairybook storyland.

The faint, wonderful drone of the city comes up to my windows and my little blue china bear sits on the sill and meditates gravely on the endless scribble of rooftops. Somewhere in the asphalt jungle a poem is being written, a knife thrown, a symphony played, a girl kissed, a man murdered. In the city below me, they are acting out the divine comedy of life, raucous and beautiful. Shall I tell Miss Judy to stay away, this is not for you? Because if it isn't what is?

Ah, Miss Judy. I have come to the bottom of my letter and I have told you nothing. Can you come, perhaps, but leave your heart home? No, I didn't think so. Well, then—come if you must. Fasten everything tight, cover your soul with cellophane, grit your teeth — and come then, for the ride of your life. Once seen, never forgotten. All for the price of a thin dime . . . hurry, hurry, hurry. . . .

Line up your torso for beauty and you'll make real strides toward litheness and gracefulness!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

The ability to be objective about oneself is a great advantage. If you can see yourself as others see you, you can make great strides in your campaign for self improvement. It's a capacity that anyone can acquire if he or she will just set aside a few minutes each week to honestly evaluate personal qualities, both good and bad. The sad thing is that too few are willing.

Important Discoveries

Here's one of the evaluations that can be made in that manner. Are others impressed with your litheness, flexibility and gracefulness? Or do they see rounded shoulders, a crooked neck, or a dowager's hump when they look at you. Look at your side view in a full length mirror. If you study, your reflection as though it were someone you never have met, the answer will be apparent.

The difference between a good and bad answer to those questions lies in your body line-up. Any flaws prove that bad habits have caused the various parts of your body to align in an unnatural relationship, thereby making beauty impossible . . . that is, until you replace your bad habits with good ones.

And this is something you can do easily. The benefits are so vastly worthwhile that it is difficult to understand why anyone would pass up the opportunity to acquire them.

If you wish to get your torso into a beauty line-up, use these exercises to spur your thrust toward better habits:

Beauty Habits

1. Sit with your arms outstretched at shoulder level. Hold your head high. Circle your arms behind your shoulders as far back as you can reach, first forward and then backward. Twenty-five times in each direction.

2. Sit cross-legged with your wrists crossed in your lap. Fling your arms up and well behind the shoulders. At the same time, let your head drop as far back as possible. Fifteen times daily.

Teach your body these streamlining ways. Soon you will see your best self in your mirror—and you'll be seeing yourself as others see you at the same time!

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

OMAHA, Sept. 26 (INS)—So suppose it suddenly drops on New York, on Washington, or Chicago, or Pittsburgh's steel, or Detroit's tool shop, or the places on the coast where they punch out airplanes, or London, Paris, Kalamazoo.

We then would be in A-war 1 (no doubt the first of a series) and the most important city in the free world would promptly become this place, Omaha. For SAC is at Omaha. SAC, of course, Strategic Air Command.

SAC is not easy to write about. It is that special branch of the Air Force which would have first grabs on the A-bomb stockpile in case we had to get off the deck and start fighting back. It would reply to an A-bomb attack in kind.

And, we hastily add, how!

We were able to bomb Tokyo and two or three other Japanese cities within five months after the successful orders went from that capital to bomb Pearl Harbor. This, of course, was the ever-dramatic Doolittle raid from the deck of the carrier Hornet. About six tons of high explosives was dropped on Tokyo itself in the course of that intrepid adventure, and we were not able to go back to Tokyo to bomb it until Rosey O'Donnell led the 29's there in June of 1944.

If we and our friends had a king-sized Pearl Harbor, let's say four minutes and 12 seconds from now, and it was inspired by (let's hazard a preposterous guess and say) Russia, the retaliation would be the swiftest, surest and most appaling in the history of man.

SAC could launch an A-bomb counterattack from several points in the U. S. by means of the B-36 and from a known but hardly printable array of air fields elsewhere in the free world. Some of those fields are within canary flying distance of Russian targets. Other targets would need the full range of the 36, but the effect would be the same—once there.

The Doolittle B-25's, with the old man himself at the wheel of one of them, and interpid yound men like Ted Lawson at the sticks of those that followed, had such a sobering effect on the Japanese brass—with those six tons—that hundreds of Jap fighter planes were pulled in from the outer reaches of the nation's aggressive path and were assigned to protect the home islands, a move which took them off the backs of GI's slugging back through the stinking jungle, several thousand miles away.

One SAC bomber—one—dropped one modern bomb—one—on a Russian target could wreak as much havoc at 50,000 B-25's of Jimmy Doolittle's period. Yes, 50,000.

It is an unpardonable presumption to attempt to expand on a Churchillian conception of our times, but it is not Russia's fear of our A-bomb stockpile which has been the deterrent. It is Russia's fear of SAC's ability to move some of that stockpile to Soviet targets. That fear may be behind the Soviet Union's concentration on fine (and they are fine) jet interceptors, instead of long-range bombers.

But SAC is not a robot thing, it is airpower that springs from talented young manpower; manpower that still must go to the PX and is occasionally tempted to go AWOL, and which has its other tribulations. It is the most modern arm of the entire defense pattern and the one which would be called upon within minutes—not months or years—after an attack. There's no question about it, Gen. Curt LeMay has the finest, toughest young armed force in our annals.

Whether they could follow up the tremendous Sunday punch they could throw is debatable. They still need more planes, more bombs, more men, and they'll always need more training. Theirs is a fantastically complicated business, made up of plans not only to deliver the bomb but follow it up—at a specific time—with paper clips to handle the desk work at advance bases. In the meantime, SAC keeps the uncertain peace (if this is peace) and don't let anybody tell you different.

Scientific tests show that a lesson is learned more thoroughly if it is learned slowly.

Warrant Officer Wilson's wife, Mrs. Mabel (Stutler) Wilson, has received the Bronze Star with emblem for heroic achievement in battle that was awarded her husband posthumously.

The citation accompanying the medal read in part:

"The convoy of which Warrant Officer Wilson was a member was returning from a mission of delivering troops and ammunition to one of the regiments. When a large enemy force fired upon the convoy, Warrant Officer Wilson dismounted from his vehicle and began supervising the task of turning each vehicle around. Although exposed to enemy fire he continued with his duty until mortally wounded by enemy fire."

Besides his parents and widow, he is survived by three children, Susan Emilie, Ralph Erskine III, and Stephen Ernest; three sisters, Mrs. Florence Sampson, RFD 1, Cumberland; Mrs. Katherine Sirbaugh, Cumberland, and Mrs. Janet Wheat, Corning, N. Y., and one brother, Robert D. Wilson, RFD 1, Cumberland.

Honorary pallbearers will be Carroll Carney, Washington; Carl Pressman, Mt. Savage; George North, Cumberland, and Mark Wilson, Robert Richard, Robert Thorn, Robert Swartz, Allan Griffith, Dewey Rozzell and Glen Congill, all of Clarksburg, W. Va.

The burial squad will be from Memorial Post No. 159, American Legion, and Old Rail Post No. 6025, Veterans of Foreign Wars, both of Mt. Savage.

Church To Mark Michaelmas

FROSTBURG—The 1464-year-old Feast of St. Michael and All Angels will be celebrated at St. John's Episcopal Church Saturday with a Holy Eucharist at 10 a. m.

This feast-day of the Church was instituted in the year 487 A. D., and is sometimes referred to as "Michaelmas." Scriptural references to angels are numerous in both the Old and New Testaments. Angelology has traditionally listed nine orders of angels, including archangels and angels. St. Michael is of the order of archangels.

St. Michael and his angels are pictured in the New Testament as warring against the forces of evil, and it is in their honor the Church established this feast.

Church To Mark Michaelmas

FROSTBURG—The 1464-year-old Feast of St. Michael and All Angels will be celebrated at St. John's Episcopal Church Saturday with a Holy Eucharist at 10 a. m.

This feast-day of the Church was instituted in the year 487 A. D., and is sometimes referred to as "Michaelmas." Scriptural references to angels are numerous in both the Old and New Testaments. Angelology has traditionally listed nine orders of angels, including archangels and angels. St. Michael is of the order of archangels.

St. Michael and his angels are pictured in the New Testament as warring against the forces of evil, and it is in their honor the Church established this feast.

Republican Boss Admits Pocketing "Contributions"

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—Republican Boss Edward A. Ruppell of Staten Island admitted today he raised money in the party's name, then pocketed some of it.

Jittery office holders and eager liquor license applicants were a prime source of what the politician called "contributions."

Some of the people who paid had other names for them, however.

Ruppell told closing sessions of a state crime probe that it cost him $1,500 a year of his own money to run his county machine.

So, he said, he solicited fellow Republicans to bail him out.

"And so that is how you got various office holders to kick in, and you put it in your own pocket?" Ruppell was asked.

That set the bald, middle-aged politician to shifting in his seat.

He replied that the money he took was to cover his out-of-pocket expenses on behalf of the party.

As far as he knew, Ruppell added, no record of this money ever went onto the books of the Republican county committee.

Ruppell also told of casually accepting bundles of money from liquor license applicants.

But he said he turned this over to the party treasurer on Staten Island.

Sometimes he counted the money, Ruppell said, and sometimes he didn't bother.

The state crime commission ended a week-long public hearing on Staten Island late today.

Its report on the situation eventually will go to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and the state legislature.

Tractor-Trailer Kills Child At Frederick

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 26 (AP)—Deborah Jean Hood, two and one-half years old, of Bartonsville, was killed today when she ran into busy Patrick Street here and was struck by a tractor-trailer.

Her parents had left her with a 12-year-old girl. Apparently the child darted away and ran between parked cars.

Driver of the truck was Vernon F. Lloyd, Perrysville, Allegheny County, Pa. State's Attorney Charles U. Price absolved him of blame in the accident.

Baltimore Gamblers Imprisoned And Fined

BALTIMORE, Sept. 26 (AP)—Criminal Court Judge Joseph Sherbow hit hard at Baltimore gambling today, fining 13 defendants a total of $20,300 and sending 12 to prison for terms ranging to nine months.

Most of the cases were held over after trials last spring and early summer, pending the outcome of new trial motions before the supreme bench.

The criminal court judge also suggested that the law be changed to permit confiscation of automobiles used by numbers pickup men and race bet workers.

Boyle is to testify tomorrow.

Siskind's temper flared under repeated suggestions by Sen. Mundt (R-SD) that Boyle had a secret "tieup" with Siskind after Boyle went on the Democratic committee payroll.

Shaking his finger at the senator, Siskind shouted:

"I demand that you produce one bit of evidence of what you said. I absolutely deny there was a tieup at that time. If I have testified to that once, I have testified eight times."

Rain-Making On Big Scale Due In Pacific Northwest

YAKIMA, Wash, Sept. 26 (AP) — Rain-making is coming to the Pacific northwest's inland empire on a big-time scale.

The first generators already have been set in operation to try to "squeeze" all the rain possible from the clouds over the upper Columbia River system's watershed. The hope is that enough rain may come to ease a serious power shortage which federal officials blame on an upper Columbia River water shortage.

This project, with a government agency picking up the check, is planned on a scale to make earlier cloud-priming efforts in the region look like a drop in the bucket.

Previous rain-making efforts in the northwest have been farmer-financed in restricted areas. The farmers are still squabbling over it and threatening lawsuits. In the Yakima Valley, fruit growers have organized "Sunshine Unlimited" as an anti-rain-making organization. They contend made-to-order rain for nearby wheat lands slopped over and wrecked their cherry crops and damaged other fruits this summer.

At least one lawsuit has been filed—by an Indian who wants $800 for loss of his hay and asks an injunction against further rain-making in the vicinity.

There has been controversy in North Central Washington, too. Wheat men in one county there were pleased with rain-making results while fruit men threatened to sue if it happened again.

It has rivalled the old-time range feuds between western sheepmen and cattlemen.

Second Man Held In Parkersburg Bank Shortage

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 26 (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation today arrested a second man in connection with a $364,410 shortage at the Wood County Bank in Parkersburg, W. Va.

Special Agent Fred Hallford, chief of the Pittsburgh office of the FBI, identified the man as Hollie Stump, 49, auto dealer, Parkersburg.

Hallford said Stump is charged with conspiring with Dennis V. Layfield, 34, to violate the Federal Reserve Act by permitting $129,000 in insufficient fund checks to be honored at the bank.

Layfield, a teller in the Wood County Bank, was arrested Monday and is being held in the Wood County jail in default of $50,000 bail.

Two Babies Perish When Home Burns

SAGINAW, Mich., Sept. 26 (AP)—Two babies burned to death and two other children suffered third degree burns in a fire today that destroyed a frame shed that was their home.

The dead are Joan Ecker, 18 months old, and Mary Ellen Schick, five months old.

Rescued were four-year-old Judith Ecker and her brother, Henry, three years old. Both were hospitalized for second and third degree burns.

The children were alone when fire broke out in the two-room, one-story frame shed attached to the rear of a two-family frame house.

The mother, Mrs. Raphie Ecker, was across the street at a neighbor's home at the time.

Officials Convinced Adamic Killed Self

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Sept. 26 (AP) — Hunterdon County authorities today reaffirmed their conviction that the death of Author Louis Adamic was suicide.

They had been investigating the possibility that the left-wing author had been murdered by Red agents.

Hunterdon County Prosecutor Herbert T. Heisel issued a one paragraph announcement which said:

"On the basis of reports from the investigating officers and laboratories there is no reason to change the previous tentative conclusion that the death of Louis Adamic was suicide."

New Crime Probe Proposal Loses

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Democrats in the Senate Commerce Commttiee today voted down a Republican proposal to recreate the Senate Crime Investigation Committee and give it $150,000 for a new probe.

At the same session the committee approved four anti-gambling bills, three of which were recommended by the old crime inquiry group.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) said the proposal for a new committee was defeated 7 to 6 because Democratic members felt that the Senate District of Columbia Committee, about to look into crime conditions in the Washington area, has authority to extend its investigation to other parts of the country if need be.

One of the bills approved today would require persons sending information about horse or dog racing or other forms of gambling across state lines to obtain licenses from the Justice Department. Newspapers of general circulation, radio stations and legitimate press services would be exempted.

Army Intelligence Officer Falls To Death

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Lt. Col. Gustavus W. Evans, an Army intelligence officer, leaped or fell to his death from the old Navy Department building on Constitution Avenue today.

Col. J. R. Bogue, assistant commandant, said Evans appeared to be in excellent spirits a few minutes before he died.

Evans apparently fell from the roof of the four-story building located less than a half-mile from the White House, onto a cement driveway between two wings. An employe on the fourth floor said he saw Evans fall past his window.

As far as he knew, Ruppell added, no record of this money ever went onto the books of the Republican county committee.

Ruppell also told of casually accepting bundles of money from liquor license applicants.

But he said he turned this over to the party treasurer on Staten Island.

Sometimes he counted the money, Ruppell said, and sometimes he didn't bother.

The state crime commission ended a week-long public hearing on Staten Island late today.

Its report on the situation eventually will go to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and the state legislature.

Allen is confident he'll bring home the blue ribbon in the shaggy dog class and maybe even the best handler prize to boot. Perkimer just grits his teeth and wonders if it's worth it.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 26 (AP)—Deborah Jean Hood, two and one-half years old, of Bartonsville, was killed today when she ran into busy Patrick Street here and was struck by a tractor-trailer.

Her parents had left her with a 12-year-old girl. Apparently the child darted away and ran between parked cars.

Driver of the truck was Vernon F. Lloyd, Perrysville, Allegheny County, Pa. State's Attorney Charles U. Price absolved him of blame in the accident.

Baltimore Gamblers Imprisoned And Fined

BALTIMORE, Sept. 26 (AP)—Criminal Court Judge Joseph Sherbow hit hard at Baltimore gambling today, fining 13 defendants a total of $20,300 and sending 12 to prison for terms ranging to nine months.

Most of the cases were held over after trials last spring and early summer, pending the outcome of new trial motions before the supreme bench.

The criminal court judge also suggested that the law be changed to permit confiscation of automobiles used by numbers pickup men and race bet workers.

Boyle is to testify tomorrow.

Siskind's temper flared under repeated suggestions by Sen. Mundt (R-SD) that Boyle had a secret "tieup" with Siskind after Boyle went on the Democratic committee payroll.

Shaking his finger at the senator, Siskind shouted:

"I demand that you produce one bit of evidence of what you said. I absolutely deny there was a tieup at that time. If I have testified to that once, I have testified eight times."

Rain-Making On Big Scale Due In Pacific Northwest

YAKIMA, Wash, Sept. 26 (AP) — Rain-making is coming to the Pacific northwest's inland empire on a big-time scale.

The first generators already have been set in operation to try to "squeeze" all the rain possible from the clouds over the upper Columbia River system's watershed. The hope is that enough rain may come to ease a serious power shortage which federal officials blame on an upper Columbia River water shortage.

This project, with a government agency picking up the check, is planned on a scale to make earlier cloud-priming efforts in the region look like a drop in the bucket.

Previous rain-making efforts in the northwest have been farmer-financed in restricted areas. The farmers are still squabbling over it and threatening lawsuits. In the Yakima Valley, fruit growers have organized "Sunshine Unlimited" as an anti-rain-making organization. They contend made-to-order rain for nearby wheat lands slopped over and wrecked their cherry crops and damaged other fruits this summer.

At least one lawsuit has been filed—by an Indian who wants $800 for loss of his hay and asks an injunction against further rain-making in the vicinity.

There has been controversy in North Central Washington, too. Wheat men in one county there were pleased with rain-making results while fruit men threatened to sue if it happened again.

It has rivalled the old-time range feuds between western sheepmen and cattlemen.

Second Man Held In Parkersburg Bank Shortage

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 26 (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation today arrested a second man in connection with a $364,410 shortage at the Wood County Bank in Parkersburg, W. Va.

Special Agent Fred Hallford, chief of the Pittsburgh office of the FBI, identified the man as Hollie Stump, 49, auto dealer, Parkersburg.

Hallford said Stump is charged with conspiring with Dennis V. Layfield, 34, to violate the Federal Reserve Act by permitting $129,000 in insufficient fund checks to be honored at the bank.

Layfield, a teller in the Wood County Bank, was arrested Monday and is being held in the Wood County jail in default of $50,000 bail.

Two Babies Perish When Home Burns

SAGINAW, Mich., Sept. 26 (AP)—Two babies burned to death and two other children suffered third degree burns in a fire today that destroyed a frame shed that was their home.

The dead are Joan Ecker, 18 months old, and Mary Ellen Schick, five months old.

Rescued were four-year-old Judith Ecker and her brother, Henry, three years old. Both were hospitalized for second and third degree burns.

The children were alone when fire broke out in the two-room, one-story frame shed attached to the rear of a two-family frame house.

The mother, Mrs. Raphie Ecker, was across the street at a neighbor's home at the time.

Officials Convinced Adamic Killed Self

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Sept. 26 (AP) — Hunterdon County authorities today reaffirmed their conviction that the death of Author Louis Adamic was suicide.

They had been investigating the possibility that the left-wing author had been murdered by Red agents.

Hunterdon County Prosecutor Herbert T. Heisel issued a one paragraph announcement which said:

"On the basis of reports from the investigating officers and laboratories there is no reason to change the previous tentative conclusion that the death of Louis Adamic was suicide."

New Crime Probe Proposal Loses

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Democrats in the Senate Commerce Commttiee today voted down a Republican proposal to recreate the Senate Crime Investigation Committee and give it $150,000 for a new probe.

At the same session the committee approved four anti-gambling bills, three of which were recommended by the old crime inquiry group.

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) said the proposal for a new committee was defeated 7 to 6 because Democratic members felt that the Senate District of Columbia Committee, about to look into crime conditions in the Washington area, has authority to extend its investigation to other parts of the country if need be.

One of the bills approved today would require persons sending information about horse or dog racing or other forms of gambling across state lines to obtain licenses from the Justice Department. Newspapers of general circulation, radio stations and legitimate press services would be exempted.

Army Intelligence Officer Falls To Death

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 (AP) — Lt. Col. Gustavus W. Evans, an Army intelligence officer, leaped or fell to his death from the old Navy Department building on Constitution Avenue today.

Col. J. R. Bogue, assistant commandant, said Evans appeared to be in excellent spirits a few minutes before he died.

Evans apparently fell from the roof of the four-story building located less than a half-mile from the White House, onto a cement driveway between two wings. An employe on the fourth floor said he saw Evans fall past his window.

His family at Hancock said the automobile he was driving while on duty skidded and overturned.

Brooklyn, Giants Win, Yankees Lose; Saddler Victor

Dodgers Bomb Boston, 15-5, New York Stops Phils, 10-1

Newcombe Registers 19th Victory Behind 14-Hit "Massacre"

BOSTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—Brooklyn's harrassed but unbowed Dodgers got up off the floor today to slug out a 15-5 "must" victory over the tormenting Boston Braves in what may prove to be the crusher to the New York Giants' pennant chances.

Brooklyn now has four games left to play and can clinch the flag by winning three even if the Giants win all remaining games.

Don Newcombe, in his fourth try for this 19th victory, finally made it with an eight-hitter. The strong-armed righthander, who had won only three games in the last eight weeks, was staked to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and coasted along despite giving up home run balls to Bob Addis and Earl Torgeson in the eighth.

The Dodgers bunched all their runs into three innings. Following their riotous four run first, they really lowered the boom on starter Max Surkont with another four run outburst in the fifth. They added seven more tallies in the eighth for good measure.

Roy Campanella led the hit parade with three blows and batted in five tallies to boost his team leading total to 107. Box:

Jansen Victor Over Ex-Champs In Tight NL Race

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 (AP) — The New York Giants kept their pennant hopes simmering tonight with a crushing 10 to 1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies, pulling up once more to within a single game of the leading Brooklyn Dodgers as Larry Jansen racked up his 21st victory of the National League campaign.

Knowing they had to win or face virtual elimination after Brooklyn's defeat of Boston in the afternoon, Leo Durocher's battlers lowered the boom on last year's league champions with a four-run onslaught before a man was retired in the first inning and went on to batter six assorted Phil pitchers for the 35th victory in their last 42 games. Pep suffered a bad cut over his right eye. The bout was marked with longshoremen tactics throughout by both fighters as they met for the fourth time in a "grudge" bout.

Glenn Deremer Tops Interstate League Hurlers

Reds Pitcher Has 11-1 Victory Mark

Glenn Deremer, ace righthander for the Centerville Reds of the Interstate Baseball League, copped two individual pitching honors in the 1951 season, hurling to an 11-1 record for the winning percentage and also striking out 86 enemy batsmen for the lead in that department. It marked the second consecutive year Deremer has led the league in won-lost records.

Second best winning pitcher in the six-team circuit was Lefty Garrett, star southpaw for Moorefield's championship squad. Garrett compiled a 9-1 record while pitching the American Legion team to the league title in the Shaughnessy playoffs.

Norman Geatz, husky righthander for the Cumberland Moose gained the second best total number of victories with a 10-2 mark for the local aggregation which copped first place in regular season play but dropped the title to Moorefield in the final playoffs.

Wellersburg Wins, 5 To 2

Toler Is Victor Over Kauffman

Frank Toler bested Glenn Kauffman in the first of their three-game series as Wellersburg turned back Corriganville's County League champions 5 to 2 yesterday on the latter's diamond.

It was a well pitched duel all the way with John Horwath's triple with two on in the seventh breaking a 2-2 deadlock and deciding the battle. Horwath scored the third tally for Wellersburg on a long fly to left by Curt Kennell.

Charley Robinette paced the Wellersburg sluggers with a double and single while Horwath's triple was the big blow among the winners' five bingles.

Leo Fleegle smashed out two singles for the losers who collected only four hits off Toler who pitched this season for Hercules Powder Company in the City Industrial League.

The second game of their three-game set will get underway at 5:30 p.m. Friday at Corriganville. The score:

Shantz Hurls 18th Victory Over Leaders

Fain, Zernial And Philley Blast Out Homers In 4-1 Win

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—Little Bobby Shantz sliced the New York Yankees American League lead to 2½ games today with a six-hit 4-1 victory for the Philadelphia A's on home runs by Ferris Fain, Gus Zernial and Dave Philley.

Thus the Yanks, idle until Friday's doubleheader with Boston, still need a combination of two wins or two Cleveland deefats to clinch their third straight pennant. New York has five to play and Cleveland only two.

Shantz, a 5-foot-7 lefty, joined Mel Parnell and Virgil Trucks as four-time winners over the Yankees as a special 26th birthday persent to himself. With perfect support he would have shut out the New Yorkers. It was his 18th triumph.

Zernial's 33rd homer, following Elmer Valo's triple in the third, was a terrific blast that carried into the left field bleachers some 430 feet away. Only Joe DiMaggio and Hank Greenberg hit balls into those seats in the memory of the oldest Yankee Stadium greybeard.

Defends Title With TKO In 9th Over Pep

Challenger Fails To Answer Bell, Right Eye Is Cut

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—With Willie Pep huddling in his corner protesting to Referee Ray Miller he couldn't go on, Sandy Saddler successfully defended his world featherweight title tonight with a nine round technical knockout, in a bout marred by roughhouse wrestling tactics.

Warned repeatedly by Miller for his leg holds and body twists in this grudge battle at the Polo Grounds, Pep gave up the struggle.

A savage left hook dumped Pep on his haunches for an eight count in the second round of this wrestling match. That was the only clean cut knockdown of the evening although both were on the deck several times in bunny hugs.

Miller said he went to Pep's corner at the end of the ninth to tell him "cut out the wrestling and holding or I'll call this no contest."

He said Pep then told, "I can't go on any further. My eye bothers me."

Pep's right eye was gashed in the second round. It was a smear of blood in the third. However at the end Dr. Vincent Nardiello of the New York State Athletic Commission said "the eye was all right. He could see out of it."

A quick look at the score cards of the three officials showed Pep out front by a slender margin. Referee Ray Miller had it 5-4 for Pep and Judge Frank Forbes 5-4 for Saddler. Judge Arthur Aidala had it 4-4-1 with Pep on top in points 8-6. The AP had it 4-4-1.

Not since the heyday of Jim Londos have so many wrestling holds been demonstrated. It got so bad in the seventh that Miller warned Pep "do that again and I'll stop it." He took that round away from Wily Willie.

The referee and sixth ended with both boys on the deck. In the fifth Miller also went down, pinned between the fighters as he tried to pry them from a clinch.

Pep, 125 to 125½ for Saddler, shook up the champ in the second, fifth and sixth rounds of their fourth and probably final meeting. But he never got him down—except by wrestling.

Brooklyn, Giants Win, Yankees Lose; Saddler Victor

Dodgers Bomb Boston, 15-5, New York Stops Phils, 10-1

Newcombe Registers 19th Victory Behind 14-Hit "Massacre"

BOSTON, Sept. 26 (AP)—Brooklyn's harrassed but unbowed Dodgers got up off the floor today to slug out a 15-5 "must" victory over the tormenting Boston Braves in what may prove to be the crusher to the New York Giants' pennant chances.

Belted from pillar to post in last night's pair of shocking setbacks at the hands of the Braves, the Dodgers retaliated with a merciless 14-hit "massacre" of their own at the expense of six harried and helpless hurlers.

Brooklyn now has four games left to play and can clinch the flag by winning three even if the Giants win all remaining games.

Don Newcombe, in his fourth try for this 19th victory, finally made it with an eight-hitter. The strong-armed righthander, who had won only three games in the last eight weeks, was staked to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and coasted along despite giving up home run balls to Bob Addis and Earl Torgeson in the eighth.

The Dodgers bunched all their runs into three innings. Following their riotous four run first, they really lowered the boom on starter Max Surkont with another four run outburst in the fifth. They added seven more tallies in the eighth for good measure.

Roy Campanella led the hit parade with three blows and batted in five tallies to boost his team leading total to 107. Box:

Jansen Victor Over Ex-Champs In Tight NL Race

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26 (AP) — The New York Giants kept their pennant hopes simmering tonight with a crushing 10 to 1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies, pulling up once more to within a single game of the leading Brooklyn Dodgers as Larry Jansen racked up his 21st victory of the National League campaign.

Knowing they had to win or face virtual elimination after Brooklyn's defeat of Boston in the afternoon, Leo Durocher's battlers lowered the boom on last year's league champions with a four-run onslaught before a man was retired in the first inning and went on to batter six assorted Phil pitchers for the 35th victory in their last 42 games. Toler Is Victor Over Kauffman

Frank Toler bested Glenn Kauffman in the first of their three-game series as Wellersburg turned back Corriganville's County League champions 5 to 2 yesterday on the latter's diamond.

It was a well pitched duel all the way with John Horwath's triple with two on in the seventh breaking a 2-2 deadlock and deciding the battle. Horwath scored the third tally for Wellersburg on a long fly to left by Curt Kennell.

Charley Robinette paced the Wellersburg sluggers with a double and single while Horwath's triple was the big blow among the winners' five bingles.

Leo Fleegle smashed out two singles for the losers who collected only four hits off Toler who pitched this season for Hercules Powder Company in the City Industrial League.

The second game of their three-game set will get underway at 5:30 p.m. Friday at Corriganville. The score:

Fain, Zernial And Philley Blast Out Homers In 4-1 Win

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (AP)—Little Bobby Shantz sliced the New York Yankees American League lead to 2½ games today with a six-hit 4-1 victory for the Philadelphia A's on home runs by Ferris Fain, Gus Zernial and Dave Philley.

Thus the Yanks, idle until Friday's doubleheader with Boston, still need a combination of two wins or two Cleveland deefats to clinch their third straight pennant. New York has five to play and Cleveland only two.

Shantz, a 5-foot-7 lefty, joined Mel Parnell and Virgil Trucks as four-time winners over the Yankees as a special 26th birthday persent to himself. With perfect support he would have shut out the New Yorkers. It was his 18th triumph.

Zernial's 33rd homer, following Elmer Valo's triple in the third, was a terrific blast that carried into the left field bleachers some 430 feet away. Only Joe DiMaggio and Hank Greenberg hit balls into those seats in the memory of the oldest Yankee Stadium greybeard.

Don Buser collected the most doubles for the team during the season with 13 while Jimmy Eckhard hit the most tropies, five. Buser also hit the homeruns, eight, and went to the plate most often, 108 times, garnering the most hits, 46.

Defends Title With TKO In 9th Over Pep

Challenger Fails To Answer Bell, Right Eye Is Cut

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—With Willie Pep huddling in his corner protesting to Referee Ray Miller he couldn't go on, Sandy Saddler successfully defended his world featherweight title tonight with a nine round technical knockout, in a bout marred by roughhouse wrestling tactics.

Warned repeatedly by Miller for his leg holds and body twists in this grudge battle at the Polo Grounds, Pep gave up the struggle.

A savage left hook dumped Pep on his haunches for an eight count in the second round of this wrestling match. That was the only clean cut knockdown of the evening although both were on the deck several times in bunny hugs.

Miller said he went to Pep's corner at the end of the ninth to tell him "cut out the wrestling and holding or I'll call this no contest."

He said Pep then told, "I can't go on any further. My eye bothers me."

Pep's right eye was gashed in the second round. It was a smear of blood in the third. However at the end Dr. Vincent Nardiello of the New York State Athletic Commission said "the eye was all right. He could see out of it."

A quick look at the score cards of the the three officials showed Pep out front by a slender margin. Referee Ray Miller had it 5-4 for Pep and Judge Frank Forbes 5-4 for Saddler. Judge Arthur Aidala had it 4-4-1 with Pep on top in points 8-6. The AP had it 4-4-1.

Not since the heyday of Jim Londos have so many wrestling holds been demonstrated. It got so bad in the seventh that Miller warned Pep "do that again and I'll stop it." He took that round away from Wily Willie.

The referee and sixth ended with both boys on the deck. In the fifth Miller also went down, pinned between the fighters as he tried to pry them from a clinch.

Pep, 125 to 125½ for Saddler, shook up the champ in the second, fifth and sixth rounds of their fourth and probably final meeting. But he never got him down—except by wrestling.

Match Is Set For October 13 At Frostburg

Contest Starts 2:30; Mountain City Team Is Western Md. Champ

Frostburg's Rifle Club, 1951 champions of Western Maryland, will meet the Greenbelt Rifle Club of Prince Georges county to determine the Maryland state championship team on Saturday, October 13 at 2:30 p. m., at the Frostburg range, according to announcement by the National Rifle Association of Washington, D. C.

Much interest is being evinced by sportsmen and rifle enthusiasts in the forthcoming match and it is expected that a large number of people will turn out to witness the event.

Won Title In 1946

The Frostburg Club won the state championship in 1946 and the Mountain City men are practicing at every opportunity to be ready for the crack Greenbelt team.

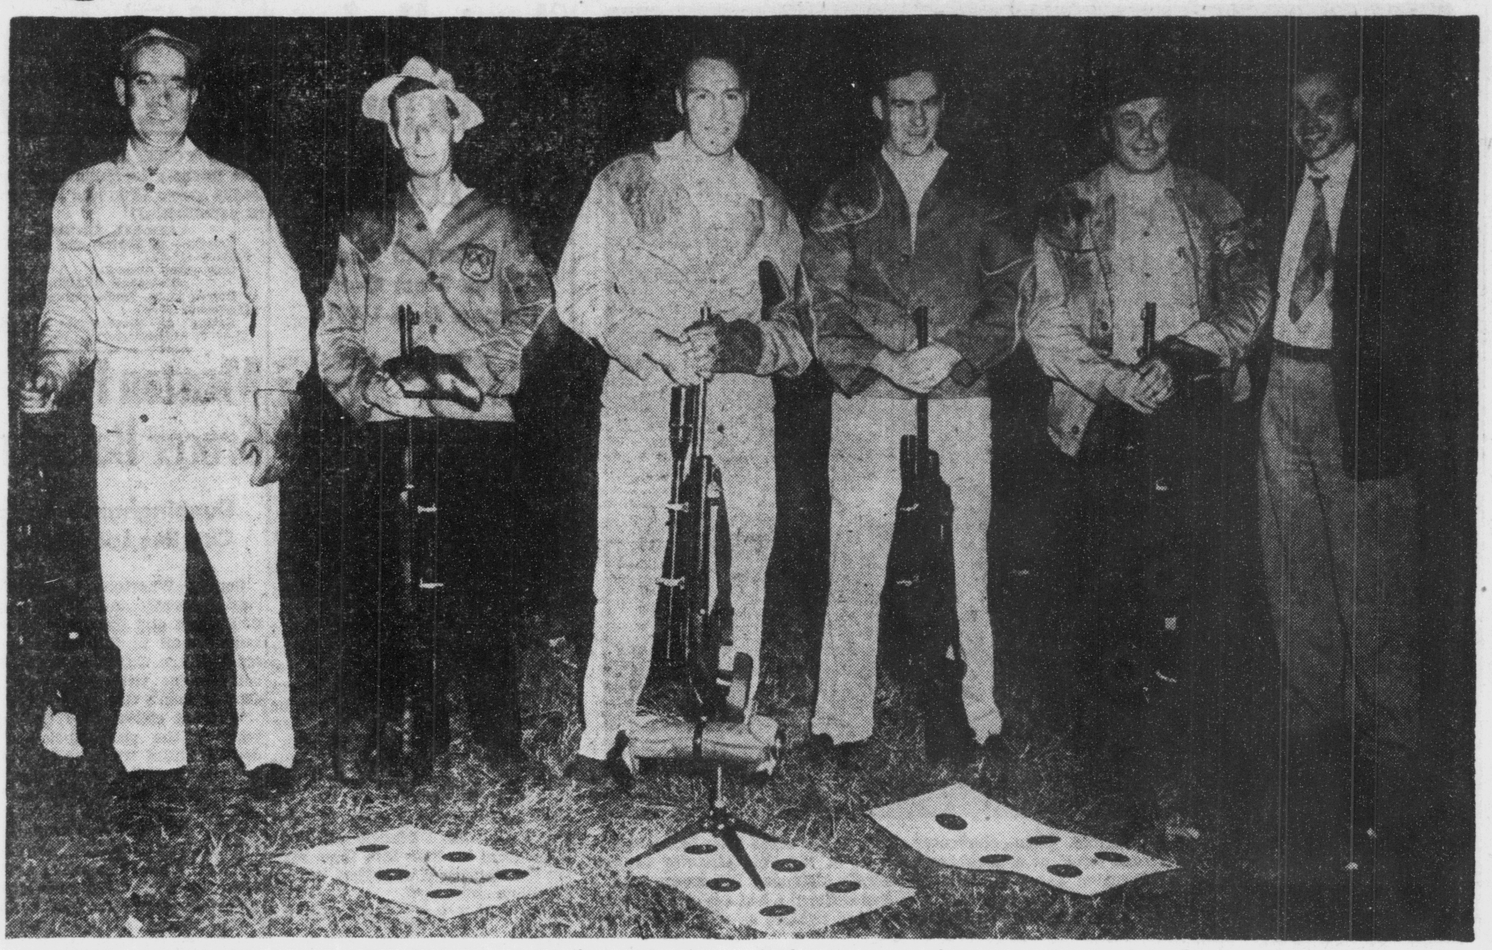
Greenbelt recently won first place in close competition with teams from all other sections of Maryland.

The Frostburg team of Arthur S. Hoffa, Howard Brode, Harry Morgan, Cliff Hitchins, Jake Livengood and Bill Morley on September 16 defeated the Cumberland Rifle Club by the narrow margin of two points to take the championship of the Western Maryland Rifle League. Other teams participating in the race were the Mountain Top Rifle Club of Oakland, and the Fort Hill and Cumberland Rifle Clubs.

Scores of Contest

Scores for the Frostburg sextet in the September 16 match against the Cumberland Rifle Club, of which the first four highest were selected to compute the total team score, were as follows:

Jake Livengood, 399 with 25Xs, Arthur S. Hoffa, 399 with 25Xs, Cliff Hitchins, 399 with 25Xs and Harry Morgan with 398 and 24 Xs. Total team score was 1,595 with 99 Xs. Also shooting were: Howard Brode, 397 with 23 Xs and Bill Morley with 395 and 25Xs. A perfect score for each man would be 400 points with 40Xs or 10 ring centers.



FROSTBURG TEAM EARNS STATE TITLE MATCH—The Frostburg Rifle Club, members of which are shown above, will shoot it out with the Greenbelt Rifle Club for the Maryland State championship Saturday, October 13 at the Frostburg range. Frostburg recently won the Western Maryland championship for 1951 by defeating Cumberland by the margin of two points. The Frostburg Club last won state honors in 1946. Market In Cautious Mood; Gains Outnumber Declines

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—The stock market was in a cautious and indecisive mood today but there were a few more advances than declines.

It was a slow moving market with only 1,520,000 shares traded.

Two railroad stocks—New York and Harlem and Mahoning Coal Railroad—skyrocketed, the former 20 points and the latter 13. Both issues are traded infrequently, however, and their sharp advances followed a usual pattern for such stocks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped 10 cents at $100.30. Industrials were down 20 cents, railroads 60 cents and utilities were unchanged.

There were 478 advances and 374 declines among the 1,124 issues traded. Forty-one stocks hit new 1951 highs and 12 dropped to new low points.

The leader on the list of 15 most active stocks was Colorado Fuel and Iron which was down ⅜ at 24 on a turnover of 23,000 shares.

Among the stronger issues of the session were American Woolen, up 1¼ at 38½; Zenith Radio, ahead 1⅝ at 69; Freeport Sulphur (new) up 2¾ at 46½ (13th most active); International Minerals, ahead 1⅞ at 42 (11th most active), and Universal Pictures, up 1 at 14¼ (the most active).

As a group steels were among the strong categories. U. S. Steel gained ¼ at 43⅛ and Bethlehem a similar figure at 54⅝.

In the rails, Santa Fe gained ¼ at 80½, New York Central was up ⅛ at 19¾ and Pennsylvania was ahead ⅛ at 20. Southern Pacific was down ½ at 65½, Southern Railway was off ⅜ at 55 and Baltimore and Ohio lost ⅛ at 21⅝.

Chrysler and Packard were among the motor gainers, U. S. Rubber was up, Boeing, Douglas and United Aircraft moved ahead. Anaconda was up ¾ at 49 and Kennecott Copper ⅛ at 84¾.

Market In Cautious Mood; Gains Outnumber Declines

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP)—The stock market was in a cautious and indecisive mood today but there were a few more advances than declines.

It was a slow moving market with only 1,520,000 shares traded.

Two railroad stocks—New York and Harlem and Mahoning Coal Railroad—skyrocketed, the former 20 points and the latter 13. Both issues are traded infrequently, however, and their sharp advances followed a usual pattern for such stocks.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dropped 10 cents at $100.30. Industrials were down 20 cents, railroads 60 cents and utilities were unchanged.

There were 478 advances and 374 declines among the 1,124 issues traded. Forty-one stocks hit new 1951 highs and 12 dropped to new low points.

The leader on the list of 15 most active stocks was Colorado Fuel and Iron which was down ⅜ at 24 on a turnover of 23,000 shares.

Among the stronger issues of the session were American Woolen, up 1¼ at 38½; Zenith Radio, ahead 1⅝ at 69; Freeport Sulphur (new) up 2¾ at 46½ (13th most active); International Minerals, ahead 1⅞ at 42 (11th most active), and Universal Pictures, up 1 at 14¼ (the most active).

As a group steels were among the strong categories. U. S. Steel gained ¼ at 43⅛ and Bethlehem a similar figure at 54⅝.

In the rails, Santa Fe gained ¼ at 80½, New York Central was up ⅛ at 19¾ and Pennsylvania was ahead ⅛ at 20. Southern Pacific was down ½ at 65½, Southern Railway was off ⅜ at 55 and Baltimore and Ohio lost ⅛ at 21⅝.

Chrysler and Packard were among the motor gainers, U. S. Rubber was up, Boeing, Douglas and United Aircraft moved ahead. Anaconda was up ⅜ at 49 and Kennecott Copper ⅛ at 84¾.

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26 (INS)—The lonesome gal (in private life Jean Russeau) with the S. A. voice on the radio, won't be let down on the screen. Dore Schary, who bought the rights to her life story, tells me that either Lana Turner or Ava Gardner, depending upon which one is free, will play the role of the girl whose soothing dulcet speech won her millions of radio fans.

This program, which comes on at night and ends with—"this is your lonesome gal who loves you better than anyone in the world," started in Dayton, Ohio, on a single station in 1947. It was heard and put on the big time. Now Jean and her husband, Bill Russeau, who is producer, maintain regular offices here.

The story on the screen will be that of a girl who doesn't let her loneliness get her down.

Jean is in her early thirties—she's good looking, brunette, and hails from Texas.

Harold and Mildred Lloyd were pleasantly surprised when they arrived in New York from Europe to be met by Harold Jr., on a 12-day furlough.

Harold, in an interview says that he's going to make a new picture in Germany. He'll play the adult Harold Lloyd, glasses and all. He was encouraged to do this by "The Lloyd's Laugh Parade," a compilation of the big scenes from his famous films from 1918 on, which he ran in Europe.

Well, we've had few comics to compare with Harold. The return of Buster Keaton and Laurel and Hardy prove these boys are still good at the box office.

With "Millionaire For Christy" launched and doing well where it was shown, Bert Friedlob is turning his attention to another independent—this one neither a comedy nor a starring film for his glamorous wife, Elanor Parker.

Bert has just optioned Fred Brady's story, "Little Yellow Son," a moving yarn about a little Korean war orphan adopted by one GI in particular and by his whole company in general.

And never let it be said Bert isn't ambitious. For the hero he wants Montgomery Clift. Come to think of it, the story sounds not unlike Monty's first big hit, "The Search."

Gave me a start to hear that Universal-International has plans to build Gigi Perreau into another Shirley Temple. That's how sold this studio is on the 10-year-old child actress.

Certainly, Gigi is nothing like curly-haired, dimpled, blonde Shirley when she was the same age, and I think the Temple tie-up could hurt her. Gigi has distinction of her own and a great deal of her native French charm, diminutive brand.

So, let's just say she continues on her juvenile way to stardom in another good role—her fourth at U. I. in "Oh, Money, Money."

Talked with former ambassador Lewis Douglas, who was having dinner at Romanoff's with his old friends Neil McCarthy and Spencer Tracy. The ambassador told me he was going to New York to meet Mrs. Douglas. Col. Serge Oblensky stopped by my table. He's here on business for the Sherry-Netherlands.

Two happy people, Mary Anita Loos and Richard Sale, were having dinner at a table for two at La Rue.

Mal and Ray Milland take off this weekend for the Philadelphia opening of their close friend, Ann Sothern, in "Faithfully Yours."

Greer Garson and Buddy Fogelson will have a new barn to end all barns. Walter Cook, famous architect, who was their guest at their ranch, drew plans and presented them to the Fogelsons for a gift.

Although Ginger Rogers' show, "Love and Let Love" received bad out of town reviews, the advance sale in New York is $250,000. I hear Ginger would like to withdraw from the play—she feels it isn't right for her.

Jack Benny will again act as master of ceremonies for the annual photographers press ball October 8 at Ciro's.

Sometime romance happens quickly. Elaine Lynn, one of the pretty girls engaged by Wald and Krasna to distribute cards on "Behave Yourself" in parking lots, handed one to David Athshuler, of San Francisco. Result—Elaine and Althshuler are now honeymooning in Mexico.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Firemen Transferred By Chief Parker

Yesterday was moving day for a number of firemen, with Chief Virgil A. Parker announcing changes involving all four of the city's houses.

Austin L. Warnick, a driver, went from West Side to Central and John L. Gormer, a pipeman at South End, is at Central as a driver. Frederick Neus remains at West Side, but has been made a driver.

Pipemen changing locations are: William M. Hartung from South End to East Side, Frank F. McCreary from Central to South End, Calvin H. Wilt from East Side to South End, Fred G. Potts from West Side to East Side, Harry D. Smith from West Side to Central, Louis E. Hartung from Central to East Side, William T. Shuck from East Side to West Side and Clifton J. Plans For City's New Filter Plant Nearing Completion

Plans for the first phase of the modernization of the Lake Gordon water plant are 90 per cent complete and may be ready for bids within the next two weeks.

Water Commissioner George H. Tederick said yesterday he expected the completed plans in ten days. He made the statement after a conference with Robert T. Regester, Baltimore, consulting engineer for the city on the Lake Gordon work.

Tederick said the first phase of the project calls for six new filters to bring the plant's capacity to approximately 18,000,000 gallons.

Regester and a member of his staff, Harry Brenner, met with Tederick, Mayor Thomas S. Post and City Attorney W. Earle Cobey yesterday. Regester went over each step in the plan and explained them, Tederick said.

One point emphasized was that there will be no interruption of service when work on the water plant gets underway.

The plans shown yesterday reveal the filters to be operated electrically and with the latest motor-driven valves. Any one can be switched off without disrupting the operation of the others. Concrete walks have been arranged so that operations of the filters may be seen at all times. Housing of these filters is also included in the first phase.

The second phase of the project is to house the old filters and mechanize them, Tederick said.

Man Is Convicted In Truck Accident

Henry Thomas Grahame, 47, who was the operator of a truck that crashed against the residence of James T. Coyle, 700 Louisiana Avenue on September 17, was found guilty of a reckless driving charge Tuesday in Trial Magistrate's Court.

Magistrate J. Milton Dick suspended a $10 fine, but warned Grahame that another reckless driving charge would find him losing his license.

Grahame was taken into custody by City Officer Kenneth Morrisey. He had no insurance on the pickup truck which was demolished.

More species of native trees have been found in the Great Smokies national park by scientists than in all Europe.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Is it your own fault if you are bored?

Answer: More so than you are apt to realize. If you are chronically bored, the immediate reason usually is that you will not allow yourself to recognize your existing opportunities for interest and pleasure. This refusal in turn grows out of your anger at being unable to get what you really want, or want most—possibly because you are afraid to try. If you really want to change your occupation but don't dare to "take the plunge," your present job will seem more boring than it really need be. And if people bore you, it may be because you are afraid (or don't know how) to win the deference and admiration you would like to have them give you.

May your dreams be prophetic?

Answer: In just one way. Your dreams are products of unconscious wishes, and as these often exert a greater influence on your actions than your conscious intentions do, your dreams may foretell the future in so far as it depends on what you will do. You may dream of quarreling with someone if unconsciously you want to do so, and psychiatrists have claimed to foresee suicide on the basis of dreams which revealed a patient's self-destructive wishes. If you dream of losing your job it may mean—though there are other possibilities—that you are planning to get yourself fired. But no dream of yours can predict whether it will rain tomorrow.

Does your response to "stress" vary?

Answer: No, says Dr. John L. Lacey of the Fels Research Institute, Yellow Springs, Ohio. Experiments on expectant mothers subjected to "mild psychological stress" indicate that each person's bodily response to stress is characteristic of him and is always the same. This includes the effect on his blood pressure, the degree to which his palms conduct electric current and the variations in his heart beat—which are incidentally the reactions measured by a "lie detector." If anyone knew you well enough, he should be able to predict with reasonable accuracy just how fear or nervous tension would affect your physical health.

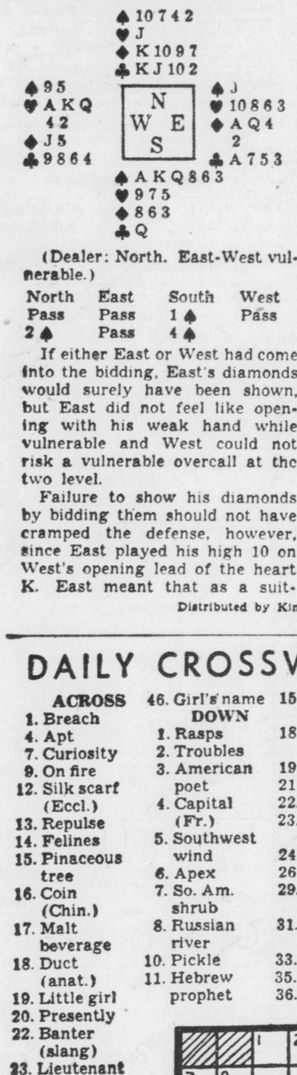
"The Authority on Authorities"

WORST CRIME OF ALL

TRUMPING your partner's ace is not the worst of all bridge crimes. Far more culpable is the lazyman's failing to pay attention and neglecting to notice what bids have been made and exactly what cards have been played. It is particularly important to see just what your partner puts on the various tricks, even when his plays are mere spot cards. They guide you on what later play or plays will best enable him to take tricks in his hand. And they, of course, are just as valuable as tricks you make yourself.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

If either East or West had come into the bidding, East's diamonds would surely have been shown, but East did not feel like opening with his weak hand while vulnerable and West could not risk a vulnerable overcall at the two level.

Failure to show his diamonds by bidding them should not have cramped the defense, however, since East played his high 10 on West's opening lead of the heart K. East meant that as a suit-preference signal, asking West to shift to the higher-ranking of the other two suits, diamonds in preference to clubs.

If West had noticed that card and led his diamond J, East would have scored tricks there with the A and Q, next his club A to set the contract one trick, and another diamond lead by East would have been ruffed by West to put South down two.

But West paid no attention to his partner's card. He had riveted his attention on the dummy and decided to limit ruffs by leading his trump 9. The 10, J and A covered that, the K cleared the defense of trumps and the club Q was led to East's A. The latter, seeing three established clubs in the dummy, reckoned he would never get a trick now with his diamond A unless he scored it at once. He did so, and the rest of the tricks were South's no matter what followed. Making his contract was a pure gift from West, due to the latter's inattention.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

Slenderizing And Jet Engines

I was just thinking out loud the other day, a practise I picked up from the ad agency boys who think out loud even in their sleep, and what I was thinking out loud about was Betty Furness. Betty Furness is the girl who sells me appliances, stoves, washing machines, stuff like that. Every time Miss Furness delivers a pitch I rush right out and get the appliance. The house is stuffed with appliances, none of which seems applicable to any of my requirements but which fill the proper niches just like on television.

John Crosby

The other day, Miss Furness, the Westinghouse girl, was at her usual chores, but this time the appliance—lovely word—was a jet engine. The hot gases, she explained, went in here and came out there. She seemed just at home with the darn thing as she is with the automatic driers. But I don't think I'll be. Now look, Miss Furness, I've bought the rest of the line from top to bottom. I draw the line at jet engines. The children aren't old enough to play with one yet, and I'm too old.

• — • — •

To my knowledge this was the first jet engine—she wasn't selling it exactly. Just showing it off—to appear on a TV commercial. That's a notable first, and I've put it in my collection along with Chiquita Banana, which was the first singing commercial to be broadcast around the world (by the Voice of America, April 3.) It just goes to show which way the wind is blowing. I was under the impression television was a mass medium, suitable for toothpastes and such things, but no. Gruen is now advertising $5,000 watches on TV. The Ford Company is selling Lincolns. I don't know whom these messages are being aimed at exactly. Not at me, certainly.

There are a good many astonishing things being sold on television. Slenderizing, for example. A show called "Video Venus" sells slenderizing, a word some agency man thought up in a moment of abject despair. It was an attempt to improve on that frayed old word "reducing," an attempt to dress up the whole process of reduction. I'm against it. My own suggestion—I'm just throwing this on the table for what it's worth, boys—is weightlessing. If we have to invent a new word for all human actions, lets make it real complicated.

• — • — •

Anyway, the slenderizing commercials are the closest thing on television to a torture chamber. They've clamped down on outright torture scenes on the whodunits, but in a commercial it's all right. The girls, grinning like crazy—are put in a series of contraptions which rub them in the funniest places, roll them around and assault them in all directions. There hasn't been a spectacle quite like this since a Roman emperor used to feed young girls to the eels, another even more efficient form of slenderizing.

There have been some good commercials on view recently, too. Ford, I think, is to be especially recommended for Dr. Roy K. Marshall, the old professor who tells you quietly what makes a carburetor work, why a speedometer behaves that way, what makes an engine tick.

Dr. Marshall's little talks on the James Melton show are fairly elementary little treatises on science, but you're bound to pick up a few things you never knew before. Marshall also set some kind of a world record. His commercials were dropped for awhile and the public uproar was so great that he was put back on the show.

The Ford people have struck on another pretty interesting device to capture your attention. They've rounded up a lot of odd people who buy Ford trucks. One firm in California uses Ford trucks to drive a host of bees around the state, not to make honey, but to pollenate fruit groves—an occupation I never heard of. (I knew bees did that sort of work. Didn't know they did it on order, that way).

• — • — •

The most ill-timed commercials around just now are those for food in the early morning hours. About 7 a. m., before decent folks have grappled with their eggs, you are bombarded with invitations to partake of somebody's spaghetti, meatballs, soups, hamburgers and even—God bless us—chocolates. Throws a man's stomach four or five hours off schedule.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

Slenderizing And Jet Engines

I was just thinking out loud the other day, a practise I picked up from the ad agency boys who think out loud even in their sleep, and what I was thinking out loud about was Betty Furness. Betty Furness is the girl who sells me appliances, stoves, washing machines, stuff like that. Every time Miss Furness delivers a pitch I rush right out and get the appliance. The house is stuffed with appliances, none of which seems applicable to any of my requirements but which fill the proper niches just like on television.

John Crosby

The other day, Miss Furness, the Westinghouse girl, was at her usual chores, but this time the appliance—lovely word—was a jet engine. The hot gases, she explained, went in here and came out there. She seemed just at home with the darn thing as she is with the automatic driers. But I don't think I'll be. Now look, Miss Furness, I've bought the rest of the line from top to bottom. I draw the line at jet engines. The children aren't old enough to play with one yet, and I'm too old.

• — • — •

To my knowledge this was the first jet engine—she wasn't selling it exactly. Just showing it off—to appear on a TV commercial. That's a notable first, and I've put it in my collection along with Chiquita Banana, which was the first singing commercial to be broadcast around the world (by the Voice of America, April 3.) It just goes to show which way the wind is blowing. I was under the impression television was a mass medium, suitable for toothpastes and such things, but no. Gruen is now advertising $5,000 watches on TV. The Ford Company is selling Lincolns. I don't know whom these messages are being aimed at exactly. Not at me, certainly.

There are a good many astonishing things being sold on television. Slenderizing, for example. A show called "Video Venus" sells slenderizing, a word some agency man thought up in a moment of abject despair. It was an attempt to improve on that frayed old word "reducing," an attempt to dress up the whole process of reduction. I'm against it. My own suggestion—I'm just throwing this on the table for what it's worth, boys—is weighlessing. If we have to invent a new word for all human actions, lets make it real complicated.

• — • — •

Anyway, the slenderizing commercials are the closest thing on television to a torture chamber. They've clamped down on outright torture scenes on the whodunits, but in a commercial it's all right. The girls, grinning like crazy—are put in a series of contraptions which rub them in the funniest places, roll them around and assault them in all directions. There hasn't been a spectacle quite like this since a Roman emperor used to feed young girls to the sels, another even more efficient form of slenderizing.

There have been some good commercials on view recently, too. Ford, I think, is to be especially recommended for Dr. Roy K. Marshall, the old professor who tells you quietly what makes a carburetor work, why a speedometer behaves that way, what makes an engine tick.

Dr. Marshall's little talks on the James Melton show are fairly elementary little treatises on science, but you're bound to pick up a few things you never knew before. Marshall also set some kind of a world record. His commercials were dropped for awhile and the public uproar was so great that he was put back on the show.

The Ford people have struck on another pretty interesting device to capture your attention. They've rounded up a lot of odd people who buy Ford trucks. One firm in California uses Ford trucks to drive a host of bees around the state, not to make honey, but to pollenate fruit groves—an occupation I never heard of. (I knew bees did that sort of work. Didn't know they did it on order, that way).

• — • — •

The most ill-timed commercials around just now are those for food in the early morning hours. About 7 a. m., before decent folks have grappled with their eggs, you are bombarded with invitations to partake of somebody's spaghetti, meatballs, soups, hamburgers and even—God bless us—chocolates. Throws a man's stomach four or five hours off schedule.

Political Action Is Planned By Labor Unions

Drive Starts For Heavy Registration

The Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference is beginning plans for a concerted campaign among members of labor unions and crafts to have all members and eligible members of their families register to vote.

According to Paul L. Burley, secretary, the Conference took the action as part of a political activities program. Burley explained that with a program of continuing registration now in effect in both the city and county, a continuing campaign will be undertaken to register all eligible citizens, especially among the ranks of labor.

Burley is preparing letters to be sent to each labor union in the county and city, together with suggestions for letters to individual members, setting forth the importance of the franchise, the need to register and hours the two registration offices are open.

In addition to this campaign, which is to start immediately, Burley said labor's Sixth Congressional District political committee is being revived. Groups in Hagerstown, Cumberland and other parts of the district are being set up, with the idea that labor will support and perhaps offer the voters of both major parties, congressional candidates favorable to labor.

Preliminary discussions have already been held with labor groups in other counties of the district, Burley said. A combined meeting of representatives of various trade unions and crafts is to be held shortly, he explained, for the sole purpose of giving united endorsement to a congressional candidate or candidates.

Dry Weather Brings Severe Fire Dangers

Two-Month Drought Continues Here

Fire and forestry officials last night warned of severe fire danger in Allegany County following a two-month drought.

They urged that county residents be extremely careful to avoid fires, since water supply for fighting large blazes is near an all-time low.

Cromwell Zembower, president of the Allegany-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association, said fire companies in nearly all sections of the county depend almost entirely on streams to furnish water for quenching blazes.

Firemen Depend On Streams

Only seven or eight towns outside of Cumberland have water supplies for fire-fighting. Others must depend on whatever water is available at the scene of a fire, plus what they can carry in their booster tanks.

In Barton, the town reservoir has been dry for several days. Firemen had to build dams in Georges Creek to provide small pools from which they might pump water in an emergency.

District Forester William H. Johnson said the forest fire danger is serious, although not yet critical. Leaves are beginning to turn and fall, and undergrowth is dying.

High Winds Feared

Johnson said recent light rains have given no permanent relief, although they have served to keep the relative humidity high enough to diminish fire danger slightly.

High winds, he added, would bring the danger to the critical point by drying the woods. He said streams are at their lowest point since the late summer of 1943.

Johnson also reminded that fall brush-burning regulations went into effect September 15. The rules prohibit brush-burning except between 4 p. m. and midnight, and then only if a 10-foot cleared space is provided around the fire and adequate provisions are made for controlling the blaze.

Conlon was named at a meeting of Fort Cumberland Post 13, American Legion, Tuesday night.

Besides the annual parade, legionnaires are planning entertainment at the post home. The program includes a dance, and a speech by Daniel Burkhardt, of Baltimore, state Legion adjutant.

Reports on the annual membership drive also will be heard. The post hopes to wind up the drive by Armistice Day with renewals of the 998 memberships of record as of last year.

James Robey Returns Home From Service In Japan

James M. Robey, whose employment in the Register of Wills' office the past nine years twice has been interrupted for Navy service, has returned to Cumberland with a Navy discharge and soon will be back at his job at the Court House.

Robey, who lives on Winifred Road, came back home Tuesday after about a year's service in Japan. After a short trip he plans to report to the office of Register of Wills A. Charles Stewart early in October.

A reservist, he was recalled to active duty August 26, 1950. On September 18, 1950, he left for overseas and five days later arrived in Japan, where he remained until September 4 of this year.

Robey held the rank of communication's technician second class and served at the Naval Base at Yokosuka, some 60 miles from Tokyo. Except for the simple statement that his work obviously was in communication he would not discuss his experiences. He did not get to Korea.

The Cumberlander left Japan September 4 on the transport General Hase and arrived in San Francisco after a 12-day trip.

During his 13-month absence from his job as Deputy Register of Wills, his wife, Mrs. Audrey J. Robey, has been working in the office at the Court House.

A graduate of Fort Hill High School in 1939, Robey began working in the Register of Will's office in 1942. A year late he joined the Navy and served through 1945. During a good portion of World War Two he was shore stationed in Australia.

He came back to his job at the Court House in 1946.

A sports enthusiast, Robey has played amateur basketball and softball around town for a number of years.

Funeral services for Frederick C. "Buck" Dreyer, 71, well-known riverman and Allegany County treasurer, who died Tuesday in Memorial Hospital, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Stein's Chapel. Rev. Gerhardt A. Wagner, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, will officiate, and interment will be in St. Luke's Cemetery.

Mr. Dreyer, a veteran of 55 years of volunteer river rescue service to Western Maryland, was serving his fifth term as county treasurer and was in his 13th consecutive year in the position.

His grandfather, Frederick Christian Dreyer, came to the United States in 1832 from Germany to work on the Erie Canal. After becoming a substantial contractor and boat builder, his grandfather settled here during the final construction of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal which was completed in 1850.

Authority On Streams

Mr. Dreyer, like his grandfather, retained a love for river and canal and was regarded as an authority on the C. and O. Canal and Potomac River transportation.

Born in Cumberland a son of the late George John and Elizabeth Kaiser Dreyer, he attended public school and the Allegany County Academy here. At the age of 12 he became office boy in the McKaig Foundry and Machine shop of which he became sales manager holding the position for nine years.

Later he became a member of the firm of Smith and Dreyer, dealers in mill and machine supplies. After that he became president and general manager of the F. C. Dreyer Supply Company, Inc., here, suc-

Sailor Injured In Collision Near Romney

Moundsville Man Hospitalized Here

A 26-year-old sailor of Moundsville, W. Va., was admitted to Memorial Hospital early yesterday evening with injuries received in an auto-truck accident at 4:20 p. m. Route 28 about one-half mile north of Romney, W. Va.

According to Sergeant L. W. Kelley, of West Virginia State Police, who investigated the mishap, James M. Fisher, U. S. Navy, was driving his automobile north on Route 28 when it collided head on with a three-quarter-ton pickup truck owned by Highway Trailer Sales, Richmond, Va., and driven by Monroe A. French, 37, of Richmond, a salesman for the firm.

Wrong Side

Sgt. Kelley said that according to eye witnesses, Fisher was driving on the wrong side of the road around a curve when his car collided with the truck and hit the left front corner of a $5,000 house-trailer being towed by the truck.

Fisher's automobile turned completely around in the highway but did not turn over. Sgt. Kelley stated that Fisher was pinned inside the auto and after about 15 minutes police were able to get him out.

Fisher was taken to a Romney doctor where he was treated for face and head lacerations and a severe laceration of the left knee. He was taken to Memorial Hospital for further examination and admitted for x-rays. Hospital attendants said Fisher also suffered hip injuries.

Car Total Loss

Police said Fisher's car was a total loss and considerable damage was done to the truck and house trailer.

According to police, Fisher was enroute from Norfolk, Va., to his home in Moundsville, where he was to spend a few days before reporting for duty in Boston, Mass. French was enroute to Richmond transporting the house trailer from the factory in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Fisher will be charged with reckless driving when released from the hospital, police said.

Legion Urges Life Imprisonment For Peddling Dope To Minors

Adoption of severe penalties up to life imprisonment for adults convicted of illegally supplying narcotics to minors is being urged in a resolution passed by the executive committee of the Department of Maryland, American Legion, and approved by Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 here Tuesday night.

The resolution urges the state legislature to adopt a minimum penalty for the offense of 15 years in prison with a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

The resolution was proposed and approved at the Legion's executive committee meeting in the War Memorial Building in Baltimore on Sunday. Some 140 to 150 committeemen from all over the state were present.

Approval of the resolution followed debate of more than an hour and the debate ranged from the thought of an Eastern Shore lawyer that the proposed penalties were too severe, to the opinion of a doctor of sociology who suggested that the death penalty be the maximum sentence.

Action of the committee was prompted by the seriousness of the narcotics problem among minors in the larger cosmopolitan centers rather than among those of the rural areas of the state, a Legion spokesman said.

It was pointed out at the Baltimore meeting that U. S. Senator Dirksen has proposed the death penalty in such cases.

Petersburg Youth Is Named Best FFA Poultry Boy Of 1951

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 26 (AP) — Richard Smith, 19, of Petersburg, W. Va., will receive a special award during a meeting here after his selection as West Virginia's "Best FFA Poultry Boy of 1951."

He will be honored at the annual Northeastern Poultry Producers Council exposition and convention October 2-4.

The competition was sponsored by the council and the Vocational Agricultural Division of the West Virginia Education Department.

Council members said Smith was chosen for his outstanding record in poultry and other home farm projects as a Vo-Ag student and as a Future Farmers of America member.

During his first three years under Vo-Ag instruction, he earned $1,494.46 with his projects. He has been farming in partnership with his father, John D. Smith, on their 56-acre poultry tract since he entered high school.

The father-son partnership expects to have an output of 12,000 broiler chickens and about 400 laying hens this year. The prize-winning youth now owns 10 per cent interest in the home farm poultry enterprises and in addition is the owner of four brood sows.

State Nurses Offered Special Training In Defense Program

Dr. R. H. Riley, State Director of Civil Defense Medical Services, has received a report from Miss Helen Fisk, chief, Nursing Unit, stating that approximately 3,000 professional nurses have now received initial civil defense training in nursing aspects of atomic warfare in Baltimore and the counties of Maryland. This group includes many inactive nurses as well as those currently employed in industry, hospitals, private duty, public health and student nurse training.

Nurses may obtain the instruction near their own home by calling or writing to the Local Director of Health Services for Civil Defense for Baltimore City or for the county in which they live.

Training is considered essential to all nurses, whether active or retired, in order that they may participate in the Civil Defense program in time of disaster. Miss Fisk urges those who have not already taken the initial course to do so now to be ready to take the second phase of training when available.

The manual, "Suggested Content for the Training Program in Civil Defense Nursing," used for professional nurses was prepared by the division of Public Health Nursing, State Department of health, with the assistance of Maryland nurses who attended an institute on Nursing Aspects of Atomic Warfare, in Rochester, New York, last year.

Principals Talk About Reading

"Reading Problems in High Schools" were discussed by Allegany County high school principals at their bi-weekly meeting Tuesday at the Board of Education building.

Lewyn C. Davis, junior high school supervisor, presided at the panel discussion.

Mrs. Naomi Teter, reading teacher at Fort Hill High School, and three school principals led the discussion. Mrs. Teter's remarks centered on techniques of teaching reading in high schools.

George Klinkhammer, principal of East Side School, analyzed reading problems. Alfred Benna, principal of Barton High School, talked on "Reading Readiness." Raymond McCullough, principal of Central High School in Lonaconing, in his remarks stressed that reading is every teacher's problem.

Farmers Urge Policy Changes, Report Shows

No Eliminations Even Discussed

Elimination of any part of the program of the 12 agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture was not even discussed by Allegany County farmers at their recent family farm policy meetings around the county, according to a 15-page report on the meetings, released yesterday.

The report quotes a number of specific recommendations for changes in the programs, advanced by various farmers. However, under each of the 12 agencies the report notes "no discussion to eliminate any part of the program."

Six Meetings

Two meetings each were held at LaVale, Eckhart and Flintstone. At the first session in each community, the programs were presented. At the second meeting, farmers entered into discussions of the programs.

The report notes that total attendance at the six public meetings was 212. Of this total 93 were at Flintstone, 68 at Eckhart and 51 at LaVale. State representatives report attendance in this county higher than in any of Maryland's other 22 counties.

About three pages of generally favorable comments on the Cooperative Extension Service were featured in the report.

James H. Weimer said "I believe all of the extension programs operating in this county are very necessary and should be retained." Mrs. Marshall Porter stated that she was particularly pleased in the program as it relates to farm women. "With the help of the home demonstration agent we set up a canning center in our community this season. We canned several thousand quarts of fruits and vegetables which should be helpful in the defense effort."

"I believe each extension program in the county as it applies to farm boys is very good; but Allegany is an industrial county and there are hundreds of boys living in rural areas, small towns and villiages who are not in 4-H Clubs," William Powell said. "I would like to recommend that the Boys 4-H Club officials develop projects suitable to the needs of these boys similar to the projects for farm boys."

Michael Cosgrove was quoted in comment on the Production and Marketing Administration.

Phase Of Socialism

"The question has been raised as to why certain farmers do not participate in the PMA program. Certain farmers are individualists and when I talk to them they tell me that PMA comes under social programs. It is a phase of socialism. They do not want any part of it because it is a social program. Some farmers do not like this and will not cooperate. However, I myself, am a cooperator in the PMA program."

Ralph Brotebarkle advanced a proposal that the PMA organize a form of insurance for which farmers can pay, that will insure them against high water and flood.

Cosgrove also believes the farmers should be given discretion as to where he wants to use his lime.

Under Soil Conservation Service talks, Harry Delbrook brought up the strip mining program.

Paper Industry Progress Noted By Haywood

A preview into the future of the pulp and paper industry was outlined last night at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club by Gerald Haywood, chief research chemist of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, Luke.

Occasion for the talk was a dinner meeting of the Cumberland Section of the Instrument Society of America, which specializes in the advancement of measurement and control through instrumentation in industry.

The development of chemical research, Haywood noted, will result in the future of various by-products in the paper industry. Such products as could be used in nylon and an agent to increase the strength of rubber, as well as probable motor fuel, all are part of the industries experimentation.

In the planning stage is a paper machine capable, Haywood noted, of producing 3000 feet of paper a minute which will be about 300 inches in width.

Beginning in 105 A. D., Haywood remarked paper making was discovered by a Chinaman. The first product as described by the speaker was made from rags and inner bark of the mulberry tree.

Political Action Is Planned By Labor Unions

Drive Starts For Heavy Registration

The Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference is beginning plans for a concerted campaign among members of labor unions and crafts to have all members and eligible members of their families register to vote.

According to Paul L. Burley, secretary, the Conference took the action as part of a political activities program. Burley explained that with a program of continuing registration now in effect in both the city and county, a continuing campaign will be undertaken to register all eligible citizens, especially among the ranks of labor.

Burley is preparing letters to be sent to each labor union in the county and city, together with suggestions for letters to individual members, setting forth the importance of the franchise, the need to register and hours the two registration offices are open.

In addition to this campaign, which is to start immediately, Burley said labor's Sixth Congressional District political committee is being revived. Groups in Hagerstown, Cumberland and other parts of the district are being set up, with the idea that labor will support and perhaps offer the voters of both major parties, congressional candidates favorable to labor.

Preliminary discussions have already been held with labor groups in other counties of the district, Burley said. A combined meeting of representatives of various trade unions and crafts is to be held shortly, he explained, for the sole purpose of giving united endorsement to a congressional candidate or candidates.

Dry Weather Brings Severe Fire Dangers

Two-Month Drought Continues Here

Fire and forestry officials last night warned of severe fire danger in Allegany County following a two-month drought.

They urged that county residents be extremely careful to avoid fires, since water supply for fighting large blazes is near an all-time low.

Cromwell Zembower, president of the Allegany-Garrett County Volunteer Firemen's Association, said fire companies in nearly all sections of the county depend almost entirely on streams to furnish water for quenching blazes.

Firemen Depend On Streams

Only seven or eight towns outside of Cumberland have water supplies for fire-fighting. Others must depend on whatever water is available at the scene of a fire, plus what they can carry in their booster tanks.

In Barton, the town reservoir has been dry for several days. Firemen had to build dams in Georges Creek to provide small pools from which they might pump water in an emergency.

District Forester William H. Johnson said the forest fire danger is serious, although not yet critical. Leaves are beginning to turn and fall, and undergrowth is dying.

High Winds Feared

Johnson said recent light rains have given no permanent relief, although they have served to keep the relative humidity high enough to diminish fire danger slightly.

High winds, he added, would bring the danger to the critical point by drying the woods. He said streams are at their lowest point since the late summer of 1943.

Johnson also reminded that fall brush-burning regulations went into effect September 15. The rules prohibit brush-burning except between 4 p. m. and midnight, and then only if a 10-foot cleared space is provided around the fire and adequate provisions are made for controlling the blaze.

James Robey Returns Home From Service In Japan

James M. Robey, whose employment in the Register of Wills' office the past nine years twice has been interrupted for Navy service, has returned to Cumberland with a Navy discharge and soon will be back at his job at the Court House.

Robey, who lives on Winifred Road, came back home Tuesday after about a year's service in Japan. After a short trip he plans to report to the office of Register of Wills A. Charles Stewart early in October.

A reservist, he was recalled to active duty August 26, 1950. On September 18, 1950, he left for overseas and five days later arrived in Japan, where he remained until September 4 of this year.

Robey held the rank of communication's technician second class and served at the Naval Base at Yokosuka, some 60 miles from Tokyo. Except for the simple statement that his work obviously was in communication he would not discuss his experiences. He did not get to Korea.

The Cumberlander left Japan September 4 on the transport General Hase and arrived in San Francisco after a 12-day trip.

During his 13-month absence from his job as Deputy Register of Wills, his wife, Mrs. Audrey J. Robey, has been working in the office at the Court House.

A graduate of Fort Hill High School in 1939, Robey began working in the Register of Will's office in 1942. A year late he joined the Navy and served through 1945. During a good portion of World War Two he was shore stationed in Australia.

He came back to his job at the Court House in 1946.

A sports enthusiast, Robey has played amateur basketball and softball around town for a number of years.

Sailor Injured In Collision Near Romney

Moundsville Man Hospitalized Here

A 26-year-old sailor of Moundsville, W. Va., was admitted to Memorial Hospital early yesterday evening with injuries received in an auto-truck accident at 4:20 p. m. Route 28 about one-half mile north of Romney, W. Va.

According to Sergeant L. W. Kelley, of West Virginia State Police, who investigated the mishap, James M. Fisher, U. S. Navy, was driving his automobile north on Route 28 when it collided head on with a three-quarter-ton pickup truck owned by Highway Trailer Sales, Richmond, Va., and driven by Monroe A. French, 37, of Richmond, a salesman for the firm.

Wrong Side

Sgt. Kelley said that according to eye witnesses, Fisher was driving on the wrong side of the road around a curve when his car collided with the truck and hit the left front corner of a $5,000 house-trailer being towed by the truck.

Fisher's automobile turned completely around in the highway but did not turn over. Sgt. Kelley stated that Fisher was pinned inside the auto and after about 15 minutes police were able to get him out.

Fisher was taken to a Romney doctor where he was treated for face and head lacerations and a severe laceration of the left knee. He was taken to Memorial Hospital for further examination and admitted for x-rays. Hospital attendants said Fisher also suffered hip injuries.

Car Total Loss

Police said Fisher's car was a total loss and considerable damage was done to the truck and house trailer.

According to police, Fisher was enroute from Norfolk, Va., to his home in Moundsville, where he was to spend a few days before reporting for duty in Boston, Mass. French was enroute to Richmond transporting the house trailer from the factory in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Fisher will be charged with reckless driving when released from the hospital, police said.

Legion Urges Life Imprisonment For Peddling Dope To Minors

Adoption of severe penalties up to life imprisonment for adults convicted of illegally supplying narcotics to minors is being urged in a resolution passed by the executive committee of the Department of Maryland, American Legion, and approved by Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 here Tuesday night.

The resolution urges the state legislature to adopt a minimum penalty for the offense of 15 years in prison with a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

The resolution was proposed and approved at the Legion's executive committee meeting in the War Memorial Building in Baltimore on Sunday. Some 140 to 150 committeemen from all over the state were present.

Approval of the resolution followed debate of more than an hour and the debate ranged from the thought of an Eastern Shore lawyer that the proposed penalties were too severe, to the opinion of a doctor of sociology who suggested that the death penalty be the maximum sentence.

Action of the committee was prompted by the seriousness of the narcotics problem among minors in the larger cosmopolitan centers rather than among those of the rural areas of the state, a Legion spokesman said.

It was pointed out at the Baltimore meeting that U. S. Senator Dirksen has proposed the death penalty in such cases.

Petersburg Youth Is Named Best FFA Poultry Boy Of 1951

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 26 (AP) — Richard Smith, 19, of Petersburg, W. Va., will receive a special award during a meeting here after his selection as West Virginia's "Best FFA Poultry Boy of 1951."

He will be honored at the annual Northeastern Poultry Producers Council exposition and convention October 2-4.

The competition was sponsored by the council and the Vocational Agricultural Division of the West Virginia Education Department.

Council members said Smith was chosen for his outstanding record in poultry and other home farm projects as a Vo-Ag student and as a Future Farmers of America member.

During his first three years under Vo-Ag instruction, he earned $1,494.46 with his projects. He has been farming in partnership with his father, John D. Smith, on their 56-acre poultry tract since he entered high school.

The father-son partnership expects to have an output of 12,000 broiler chickens and about 400 laying hens this year. The prize-winning youth now owns 10 per cent interest in the home farm poultry enterprises and in addition is the owner of four brood sows.

State Nurses Offered Special Training In Defense Program

Dr. R. H. Riley, State Director of Civil Defense Medical Services, has received a report from Miss Helen Fisk, chief, Nursing Unit, stating that approximately 3,000 professional nurses have now received initial civil defense training in nursing aspects of atomic warfare in Baltimore and the counties of Maryland. This group includes many inactive nurses as well as those currently employed in industry, hospitals, private duty, public health and student nurse training.

Nurses may obtain the instruction near their own home by calling or writing to the Local Director of Health Services for Civil Defense for Baltimore City or for the county in which they live.

Training is considered essential to all nurses, whether active or retired, in order that they may participate in the Civil Defense program in time of disaster. Miss Fisk urges those who have not already taken the initial course to do so now to be ready to take the second phase of training when available.

The manual, "Suggested Content for the Training Program in Civil Defense Nursing," used for professional nurses was prepared by the division of Public Health Nursing, State Department of health, with the assistance of Maryland nurses who attended an institute on Nursing Aspects of Atomic Warfare, in Rochester, New York, last year.

Principals Talk About Reading

"Reading Problems in High Schools" were discussed by Allegany County high school principals at their bi-weekly meeting Tuesday at the Board of Education building.

Lewyn C. Davis, junior high school supervisor, presided at the panel discussion.

Mrs. Naomi Teter, reading teacher at Fort Hill High School, and three school principals led the discussion. Mrs. Teter's remarks centered on techniques of teaching reading in high schools.

George Klinkhammer, principal of East Side School, analyzed reading problems. Alfred Benna, principal of Barton High School, talked on "Reading Readiness." Raymond McCullough, principal of Central High School in Lonaconing, in his remarks stressed that reading is every teacher's problem.

Farmers Urge Policy Changes, Report Shows

No Eliminations Even Discussed

Elimination of any part of the program of the 12 agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture was not even discussed by Allegany County farmers at their recent family farm policy meetings around the county, according to a 15-page report on the meetings, released yesterday.

The report quotes a number of specific recommendations for changes in the programs, advanced by various farmers. However, under each of the 12 agencies the report notes "no discussion to eliminate any part of the program."

Six Meetings

Two meetings each were held at LaVale, Eckhart and Flintstone. At the first session in each community, the programs were presented. At the second meeting, farmers entered into discussions of the programs.

The report notes that total attendance at the six public meetings was 212. Of this total 93 were at Flintstone, 68 at Eckhart and 51 at LaVale. State representatives report attendance in this county higher than in any of Maryland's other 22 counties.

About three pages of generally favorable comments on the Cooperative Extension Service were featured in the report.

James H. Weimer said "I believe all of the extension programs operating in this county are very necessary and should be retained." Mrs. Marshall Porter stated that she was particularly pleased in the program as it relates to farm women. "With the help of the home demonstration agent we set up a canning center in our community this season. We canned several thousand quarts of fruits and vegetables which should be helpful in the defense effort."

"I believe each extension program in the county as it applies to farm boys is very good; but Allegany is an industrial county and there are hundreds of boys living in rural areas, small towns and villiages who are not in 4-H Clubs," William Powell said. "I would like to recommend that the Boys 4-H Club officials develop projects suitable to the needs of these boys similar to the projects for farm boys."

Michael Cosgrove was quoted in comment on the Production and Marketing Administration.

Phase Of Socialism

"The question has been raised as to why certain farmers do not participate in the PMA program. Certain farmers are individualists and when I talk to them they tell me that PMA comes under social programs. It is a phase of socialism. They do not want any part of it because it is a social program. Some farmers do not like this and will not cooperate. However, I myself, am a cooperator in the PMA program."

Ralph Brotebarkle advanced a proposal that the PMA organize a form of insurance for which farmers can pay, that will insure them against high water and flood.

Cosgrove also believes the farmers should be given discretion as to where he wants to use his lime.

Under Soil Conservation Service talks, Harry Delbrook brought up the strip mining program.

Paper Industry Progress Noted By Haywood

A preview into the future of the pulp and paper industry was outlined last night at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club by Gerald Haywood, chief research chemist of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, Luke.

Occasion for the talk was a dinner meeting of the Cumberland Section of the Instrument Society of America, which specializes in the advancement of measurement and control through instrumentation in industry.

The development of chemical research, Haywood noted, will result in the future of various by-products in the paper industry. Such products as could be used in nylon and an agent to increase the strength of rubber, as well as probable motor fuel, all are part of the industries experimentation.

In the planning stage is a paper machine capable, Haywood noted, of producing 3000 feet of paper a minute which will be about 300 inches in width.

Beginning in 105 A. D., Haywood remarked paper making was discovered by a Chinaman. The first product as described by the speaker was made from rags and inner bark of the mulberry tree.

Experimentation led to methods of cooking, digesting and bleaching the product. A development at the Luke plant was a new method of coating paper on the paper machine, which resulted in faster production, better quality and reduction in cost.

Haywood also remarked on the value of instrumentation in the industry. At Luke instruments are used to control temperatures and pressures in the various stages of manufacture. Flow of water and steam were also noted as being controlled and measured by the use of instrumentation.
